The black rank and file volunteered when disaster clouded the Union cause, served without pay for eighteen months till given that of white troops, faced threatened enslavement if captured, were brave in action, patient under heavy and dangerous labors, and cheerful amid hardships and privations.

Together they gave to the nation and the world undying proof that Americans of African descent possess the pride, courage, and devotion of the patriot soldier. One hundred and eighty thousand such Americans enlisted under the Union flag in 1863–1865.

Ontogenesis, or the development of the individual, is a short and quick recapitulation of phylogenesis, 1 or the development of the tribe to which it belongs, determined by the laws of inheritance and adaptation.

The History of Creation 2 [1868]

The general theory of evolution . . . assumes that in nature there is a great, unital, continuous and everlasting process of development, and that all natural phenomena without exception, from the motion of the celestial bodies and the fall of the rolling stone up to the growth of the plant and the consciousness of man, are subject to the same great law of causation—that they are ultimately to be reduced to atomic mechanics.

FRANK RICHARD STOCKTON 1834-1902

He could open either door he pleased. . . . If he opened the one, there came out of it a hungry tiger, the fiercest and most cruel that could be procured, which immediately sprang upon him, and tore him to pieces, as a punishment for his guilt. . . . But if the accused person opened the other door, there came forth from it a lady, the most suitable to his years and station that his Majesty could select among his fair subjects. . . . So I leave it with all of you: Which came out of the opened door — the lady or the tiger?

Industry in art is a necessity—not a

Wealth [North American Review, June 1889]

While the law [of competition] may be sometimes hard for the individual, it is best for the race, because it insures the survival of the fittest in every department. It is by the goodness of God that in our country we have those three unspeakably precious things: freedom of speech, freedom of conscience, and the prudence never to practice either of them.

Following the Equator, vol. 1, Pudd'nhead Wilson's New Calendar, ch. 20

"Classic." A book which people praise and don't read.

Man is the only animal that blushes. Or needs to.

Let us be thankful for the fools. But for them the rest of us could not succeed.

There are several good protections against temptations, but the surest is cowardice.

There is an old-time toast which is golden for its beauty. "When you ascend the hill of prosperity may you not meet a friend."

Each person is born to one possession which outvalues all his others — his last breath.

It takes your enemy and your friend, working together, to hurt you to the heart; the one to slander you and the other to get the news to you.

Grief can take care of itself, but to get the full value of a joy you must have somebody to divide it with.

In statesmanship get the formalities right, never mind about the moralities.

Everyone is a moon, and has a dark side which he never shows to anybody.

The reports of my death are greatly exaggerated.

The silent colossal National Lie that is the support and confederate of all the tyrannies and shams and inequalities and unfairnesses that afflict the peoples — that is the one to throw bricks and sermons at.

My First Lie, and How I Got Out of It [1900]

The blessings-of-civilization trust, wisely and cautiously administered, is a daisy. There is more money in it, more territory, more sovereignty, and other kinds of emolument, than there is in any other game that is played. But Christendom ... has been so eager to get every stake that appeared on the green cloth, that the people who sit in darkness have noticed it ... and have become suspicious of the blessings of civilization.

To the Person Sitting in Darkness [1901]

Always do right. This will gratify some people, and astonish the rest.

To the Young People's Society, Greenpoint Presbyterian Church, Brooklyn [February 16, 1901]

A powerful agent is the right word. Whenever we come upon one of those intensely right words in a book or a newspaper the resulting effect is physical as well as spiritual, and electrically prompt.

Memory

It was very pleasant to me to get a letter from you the other day. Perhaps I should have found it pleasanter if I had been able to decipher it. I don’t think that I mastered anything beyond the date (which I knew) and the signature (which I guessed at). There’s a singular and a perpetual charm in a letter of yours; it never grows old, it never loses its novelty. . . . Other letters are read and thrown away and forgotten, but yours are kept forever — unread. One of them will last a reasonable man a lifetime.

_Letter to Charles Eliot Norton_ [April 6, 1903]

I am not sorry for having wrought in common, crude material so much; that is the right American stuff; and perhaps hereafter, when my day is done, if anyone is curious to know what that noise was, it will be found to have proceeded from a small insect which was scraping about on the surface of our life and trying to get into its meaning for the sake of the other insects larger or smaller. That is, such has been my unconscious work; consciously, I was always, as I still am, trying to fashion a piece of literature out of the life next at hand.

When the hounds of spring are on winter's traces,

The mother of months in meadow or plain

Fills the shadows and windy places

With lisp of leaves and ripple of rain;

And the brown bright nightingale amorous

Is half assuaged for Itylius,

For the Thracian ships and the foreign faces,

The tongueless vigil, and all the pain.

_Ib. chorus, st. 1_

Come with bows bent and with emptying of quivers,

Maiden most perfect, lady of light,

With a noise of winds and many rivers,

With a clamor of waters, and with might;

Bind on thy sandals, O thou most fleet,

Over the splendor and speed of thy feet,

For the faint east quickens, the wan west shivers,

Round the feet of the day and the feet of the night.

_Ib. st. 2_

For winter's rains and ruins are over,

And all the season of snows and sins;
The days dividing lover and lover,
The light that loses, the night that wins;
And time remembered is grief forgotten,
And frosts are slain and flowers begotten,
And in green underwood and cover
Blossom by blossom the spring begins.

Atalanta in Calydon, chorus, st. 4

Before the beginning of years
There came to the making of man
Time, with a gift of tears;
Grief, with a glass that ran;
Pleasure, with pain for leaven;
Summer, with flowers that fell;
Remembrance fallen from heaven,
And madness risen from hell;
Strength without hands to smite;
Love that endures for a breath;
Night, the shadow of light,
And life, the shadow of death.

And love is more cruel than lust.
Time turns the old days to derision,
Our loves into corpses or wives;
And marriage and death and division
Make barren our lives.

Thou hast conquered, O pale Galilean; 1
the world has grown gray from thy breath;
We have drunken of things Lethean,
and fed on the fullness of death.
Laurel is green for a season, and love is sweet for a day;
But love grows bitter with treason, and laurel outlives not May.
Sleep, shall we sleep after all? for the world is not sweet in the end;
For the old faiths loosen and fall, the new years ruin and rend. Ib.

I shall die as my fathers died, and sleep as they sleep; even so.
For the glass of the years is brittle wherein we gaze for a span. Ib.

While he lives let a man be glad,
For none hath joy of his death.

A Lamentation [1866]. I, st. 4

If love were what the rose is,
And I were like the leaf,
Our lives would grow together
In sad or singing weather.

A Match [1866], st. 1

If you were April’s lady,
And I were lord in May. Ib. st. 5

If you were queen of pleasure,
And I were king of pain,
We’d hunt down love together,
Pluck out his flying feather,
And teach his feet a measure,
And find his mouth a rein.

The Renaissance [1873].

That sweet look of devotion which men have never been able altogether to love, and which still makes the born saint an object almost of suspicion to his earthly brethren.

Hers is the head upon which all “the ends of the world are come,” and the eyelids are a little weary. It is a beauty wrought out from within upon the flesh, the deposit, little cell by cell, of strange thoughts and fantastic reveries and exquisite passions. Set it for a moment beside one of those white Greek goddesses or beautiful women of antiquity, and how would they be troubled by this beauty, into which the soul with all its maladies has passed?

She is older than the rocks among which she sits; like the vampire, she has been dead many times, and learned the secrets of the grave; and has been a diver in deep seas, and keeps their fallen day about her; and trafficked for strange webs with Eastern merchants: and as Leda, was the mother of Helen of Troy, and, as Saint Anne, the mother of Mary; and all this has been to her but as the sound of lyres and flutes, and lives only in the delicacy with which it has molded the changing lineaments, and tinged the eyelids and the hands.

All art constantly aspires towards the condition of music.

To burn always with this hard, gem-like flame, to maintain this ecstasy, is success in life.

What we have to do is to be forever curiously testing new opinions and courting new impressions.

The Renaissance. Conclusion

Art comes to you proposing frankly to give nothing but the highest quality to your moments as they pass.

A book, like a person, has its fortunes with one; is lucky or unlucky in the precise moment of its falling in our way, and often by some happy accident counts with us for something more than its independent value.

Marius the Epicurean [1885], ch. 6

To know when one’s self is interested, is the first condition of interesting other people.

We need some imaginative stimulus, some not impossible ideal such as may shape vague hope, and transform it into effective desire, to carry us year after year, without disgust, through the routine work which is so large a part of life.

OLIVER WENDELL HOLMES, JR.

1841–1935

The life of the law has not been logic: it has been experience.

The Common Law [1881]

The law embodies the story of a nation’s development through many centuries, and it cannot be dealt with as if it contained only the axioms and corollaries of a book of mathematics. Ib.

I think that, as life is action and passion, it is required of a man that he should share the passion and action of his time at peril of being judged not to have lived.

Memorial Day Address [1884]

Through our great good fortune, in our youth our hearts were touched with fire. Ib.

The Law, wherein, as in a magic mirror, we see reflected not only our own lives, but the lives of all men that have been! When I think on this majestic theme, my eyes dazzle.1

To the Suffolk Bar Association [1885]

I say to you in all sadness of conviction, that to think great thoughts you must be heroes as well as idealists.

The Profession of the Law [1886]

Thus only can you gain the secret isolated joy of the thinker, who knows that, a hundred years after he is dead and forgotten, men who never heard of him will be moving to the measure of his thought — the subtle rapture of a postponed power, which the world knows not because it has no external trappings, but which to his prophetic vision is more real than that which commands an army.

The Profession of the Law

The prophecies of what the courts will do in fact, and nothing more pretentious, are what I mean by the law.

The Path of the Law [1897]

Certainty generally is illusion, and repose is not the destiny of man. Ib.

The remoter and more general aspects of the law are those which give it universal interest. It is through them that you not only become a great master in your calling, but connect your subject with the universe and catch an echo of the infinite, a glimpse of its unfathomable process, a hint of the universal law.

The rule of joy and the law of duty seem to me all one.

Speech at Bar Association Dinner, Boston [1900]

Life is an end in itself, and the only question as to whether it is worth living is whether you have enough of it.1 Ib.

A great man represents a great ganglion in the nerves of society, or, to vary the figure, a strategic point in the campaign of history, and part of his greatness consists in his being there.

The Class of '61 [Speeches, 1913]

I learned in the regiment and in the class the conclusion, at least, of what I think the best service that we can do for our country and for ourselves: To see so far as one may, and to feel the great forces that are behind every detail . . . to hammer out as compact and solid a piece of work as one can, to try to make it first rate, and to leave it unadvertised.

Ib.

The only prize much cared for by the powerful is power. The prize of the general is not a bigger tent, but command.

Law and the Court [1913]

Judges are apt to be naif, simple-minded men, and they need something of Mephistopheles. We too need education in the obvious — to learn to transcend our own convictions and to leave room for much that we hold dear to be done away with short of revolution by the orderly change of law.

Ib.

I do not think the United States would come to an end if we lost our power to declare an Act of Congress void. I do think the Union would be imperiled if we could not make that declaration as to the laws of the several states.

Ib.

The attacks upon the Court are merely an expression of the unrest that seems to wonder vaguely whether law and order pay. When the ignorant are taught to doubt, they do not know what they safely may believe.

Law and the Court

I do not think we need trouble ourselves with the thought that my view depends upon differences of degree. The whole law does so as soon as it is civilized.

I recognize without hesitation that judges do and must legislate, but they can do so only interstitially; they are confined from molar to molecular motions.

_Southern Pacific Co. v. Jensen_, 244 U.S. 205, 221, [1917]

The common law is not a brooding omnipresence in the sky but the articulate voice of some sovereign or quasi-sovereign that can be identified.

Certitude is not the test of certainty. _Natural Law_ [1918]

The most stringent protection of free speech would not protect a man in falsely shouting fire in a theater and causing a panic. . . . The question in every case is whether the words used are used in such circumstances and are of such a nature as to create a clear and present danger that they will bring about the substantive evils that Congress has a right to prevent.

_Schenck v. United States_, 249 U.S. 47 [1919]

When men have realized that time has upset many fighting faiths, they may come to believe even more than they believe the very foundations of their own conduct that the ultimate good desired is better reached by free trade in ideas—that the best test of truth is the power of the thought to get itself accepted in the competition of the market, and that truth is the only ground upon which their wishes safely can be carried out. That at any rate is the theory of our Constitution. It is an experiment, as all life is an experiment.

_Abrams v. United States_, 250 U.S. 616, 630 [1919]

I dare say that I have worked off my fundamental formula on you that the chief end of man is to frame general propositions and that no general proposition is worth a damn.

_Letter to Sir Frederick Pollock_ [1920]

Upon this point a page of history is worth a volume of logic.

It is said that this manifesto is more than a theory, that it was an incitement. Every idea is an incitement.

Three generations of imbeciles are enough.

_Buck v. Bell_, 274 U.S. 200, 207 [1927]

But if we are to yield to fashionable conventions, it seems to me that theaters are as much devoted to public use as anything well can be. We have not that respect for art that is one of the glories of France. But to many the superfluous is the necessary,1 and it seems to me that Government does not go beyond its sphere in attempting to make life livable for them.

The power to tax is not the power to destroy while this Court sits.2

_Panhandle Oil Co. v. Knox_, 277 U.S. 223 [1928]

For my part I think it a less evil that some criminals should escape than that the government should play an ignoble part. . . . If the existing code does not permit district attorneys to have a hand in such dirty business, it does not permit

Olmstead v. United States, 277 U.S. 438, 470 [1928]

United States v. Schwimmer, 279 U.S. 644, 653 [1928]

The riders in a race do not stop short when they reach the goal. There is a little finishing canter before coming to a standstill. There is time to hear the kind voice of friends and to say to one's self: "The work is done." But just as one says that, the answer comes: "The race is over, but the work never is done while the power to work remains." The canter that brings you to a standstill need not be only coming to rest. It cannot be, while you still live. For to live is to function. That is all there is in living.

WILLIAM JAMES
1842–1910

I have often thought that the best way to define a man's character would be to seek out the particular mental or moral attitude in which, when it came upon him, he felt himself most deeply and intensely active and alive. At such moments there is a voice inside which speaks and says: "This is the real me!"

Nothing so fatiguing as the eternal hanging on of an uncompleted task.

_Ib._ p. 249, to Carl Stumpf [January 1, 1886]

The difference between the first- and second-best things in art absolutely seems to escape verbal definition — it is a matter of a hair, a shade, an inward quiver of some kind — yet what miles away in the point of preciousness!

_Ib._ II, p. 87, to Henry Rutgers Marshall [February 7, 1899]

Most people live, whether physically, intellectually or morally, in a very restricted circle of their potential being. They _make use_ of a very small portion of their possible consciousness, and of their soul's resources in general, much like a man who, out of his whole bodily organism, should get into a habit of using and moving only his little finger. Great emergencies and crises show us how much greater our vital resources are than we had supposed.1

tive agent. It alone is what keeps us all within the bounds of ordinance.

The Principles of Psychology

[1890], ch. 4

There is no more miserable human being than one in whom nothing is habitual but indecision.

Keep the faculty of effort alive in you by a little gratuitous exercise every day. That is, be systematically ascetic or heroic in little unnecessary points, do every day or two something for no other reason than that you would rather not do it, so that when the hour of dire need draws nigh, it may find you not unnerved and untrained to stand the test.

The hell to be endured hereafter, of which theology tells, is no worse than the hell we make for ourselves in this world by habitually fashioning our characters in the wrong way.

We are spinning our own fates, good or evil, and never to be undone. Every smallest stroke of virtue or of vice leaves its never so little scar. Nothing we ever do is, in strict scientific literalness, wiped out.

Consciousness . . . does not appear to itself chopped up in bits. . . . A "river" or a "stream" are the metaphors by which it is most naturally described. In talking of it hereafter, let us call it the stream of thought, of consciousness, or of subjective life.

As we take, in fact, a general view of the wonderful stream of our consciousness, what strikes us first is this different pace of its parts. Like a bird's life, it seems to be made of an alternation of flights and percahings.

As the brain changes are continuous, so do all these consciousnesses melt into each other like dissolving views. Properly they are but one protracted consciousness, one unbroken stream.

The last peculiarity of consciousness to which attention is to be drawn in this first rough description of its stream is that . . . it is always interested more in one part of its object [thought] than in another, and welcomes and rejects, or chooses, all the while it thinks.

The Principles of Psychology, ch. 4

An act has no ethical quality whatever unless it be chosen out of several all equally possible.

In its widest possible sense, however, a man's Self is the sum total of all that he can call his, not only his body and his psychic powers, but his clothes and his house, his wife and children, his ancestors and friends, his reputation and works, his lands and horses, and yacht and bank account. All these things give him the same emotions. If they wax and prosper, he feels triumphant; if they dwindle and die away, he feels cast down.

So our self-feeling in this world depends entirely on what we back ourselves to be and do.

Creatures extremely low in the intellectual scale may have conception. All that is required is that they should recognize the same experience again. A polyp would be a conceptual thinker if a feeling of "Hello! thingumbob again!" ever flitted through its mind.

Let anyone try, I will not say to arrest, but to notice or attend to, the present moment of time. One of the most baffling experiences occurs. Where is it, this present? It has melted in our grasp, fled ere we could touch it, gone in the instant of becoming.

Genius . . . means little more than the faculty of perceiving in an unhabitual way.

The impulse to take life strivings is indestructible in the race.

The art of being wise is the art of knowing what to overlook.
The more rational statement is that we feel sorry because we cry, angry because we strike, afraid because we tremble, and not that we cry, strike, or tremble, because we are sorry, angry, or fearful, as the case may be. Without the bodily states following on the perception, the latter would be purely cognitive in form, pale, colorless, destitute of emotional warmth.

This life is worth living, we can say, since it is what we make it, from the moral point of view.¹

Ib.

If this life be not a real fight, in which something is eternally gained for the universe by success, it is no better than a game of private theatricals from which one may withdraw at will. But it feels like a real fight.

Ib.

Be not afraid of life. Believe that life is worth living, and your belief will help create the fact.

Ib. p. 62

Man's chief difference from the brutes lies in the exuberant excess of his subjective propensities—his preeminence over them simply and solely in the number and in the fantastic and unnecessary character of his wants, physical, moral, aesthetic, and intellectual. Had his whole life not been a quest for the superfluous, he would never have established himself as inexpugnably as he has done in the necessary.

_The Will to Believe. Reflex Action and Theism_

All the higher, more penetrating ideals are revolutionary. They present themselves far less in the guise of effects of past experience than in that of probable causes of future experience.

Ib. _The Moral Philosopher and the Moral Life_

There is but one unconditional commandment, which is that we should seek incessantly, with fear and trembling, so to vote and to act as to bring about the very largest total universe of good which we can see.

Ib.

An unlearned carpenter of my acquaintance once said in my hearing: "There is very little difference between one man and another; but what little there is, is very important." This distinction seems to me to go to the root of the matter.

Ib. _The Importance of Individuals_

Wherever you are it is your own friends who make your world.

Tell him to live by yes and no—yes to everything good, no to everything bad.

Ib.

Religion . . . shall mean for us the feelings, acts, and experiences of individual men in their solitude.

_The Varieties of Religious Experience [1902]. Lecture 2_

Religion . . . is a man's total reaction upon life.

Ib.
We can act as if there were a God; feel as if we were free; consider Nature as if she were full of special designs; lay plans as if we were to be immortal; and we find then that these words do make a genuine difference in our moral life. The Varieties of Religious Experience. Lecture 3

There is no worse lie than a truth misunderstood by those who hear it. Ib. Lectures 14 and 15

The philosophy which is so important in each of us is not a technical matter; it is our more or less dumb sense of what life honestly and deeply means. It is only partly got from books; it is our individual way of just seeing and feeling the total push and pressure of the cosmos. Pragmatism [1907]. Lecture 1

I myself believe that the evidence for God lies primarily in inner personal experiences. Ib. Lecture 3

Our minds thus grow in spots; and like grease spots, the spots spread. But we let them spread as little as possible: we keep unaltered as much of our old knowledge, as many of our old prejudices and beliefs, as we can. We patch and tinker more than we renew. The novelty soaks in; it stains the ancient mass; but it is also tinged by what absorbs it. Ib. Lecture 5

Truth happens to an idea. It becomes true, is made true by events. Its verity is in fact an event, a process: the process namely of its verifying itself, its verification. Its validity is the process of its valid-ation. Ib. Lecture 6

Pluralism lets things really exist in the each-form or distributively. Monism thinks that the all-form or collective-unit form is the only form that is rational. A Pluralistic Universe [1909]. Lecture 8

What we really need the poet’s and orator’s help to keep alive in us is not ... the common and gregarious courage which Robert Shaw showed when he marched with you, men of the Seventh Regiment. It is that more lonely courage which he showed when he dropped his warm commission in the glorious Second to head your dubious fortunes, Negroes of the Fifty-fourth. That lonely kind of courage (civic courage, as we call it in times of peace) is the kind of valor to which the monuments of nations should most of all be reared.1 Memories and Studies [1911]. Robert Gould Shaw: Oration Upon the Unveiling of the Shaw Monument [May 31, 1897]

The deadliest enemies of nations are not their foreign foes; they always dwell within their borders. And from these internal enemies civilization is always in need of being saved. The nation blessed above all nations is she in whom the civic genius of the people does the saving day by day, by acts without external picturesqueness; by speaking, writing, voting reasonably; by smiting corruption swiftly; by good temper between parties; by the people knowing true men when they see them, and preferring them as leaders to rabid partisans or empty quacks. Ib.

Democracy is still upon its trial. The civic genius of our people is its only bulwark. Ib.

So long as antimilitarists propose no substitute for war’s disciplinary function, no moral equivalent of war, analogous, as one might say, to the mechanical equivalent of heat, so long they fail to realize the full inwardness of the situation. Ib. The Moral Equivalent of War

Our colleges ought to have lit up in us a lasting relish for the better kind of man, a loss of appetite for mediocrities. Ib. The Social Value of the College-Bred

1 See Robert Lowell, p. 1076b.
Real culture lives by sympathies and admirations, not by dislikes and disdains; under all misleading wrappings it pounces unerringly upon the human core.

Memories and Studies. The Social Value of the College-Bred

The "through-and-through" universe seems to suffocate me with its infallible impeccable all-pervasiveness. . . . It seems too buttoned-up and white-chokered and clean-shaven a thing to speak for the vast slow-breathing unconscious Kosmos with its dread abysses and its unknown tides.

And nothing-withholding and free
Ye publish yourselves to the sky and offer yourselves to the sea!

Ib. l. 65

As the marsh hen secretly builds on the watery sod,
Behold I will build me a nest on the greatness of God:
I will fly in the greatness of God as the marsh hen flies
In the freedom that fills all the space 'twixt the marsh and the skies:
By so many roots as the marsh grass sends in the sod
I will heartily lay me a-hold on the greatness of God:
Oh, like to the greatness of God is the greatness within
The range of the marshes, the liberal marshes of Glynn.

² You know how opposed your whole “third manner” of execution is to the literary ideals which animate my crude and Orson-like breast, mine being to say a thing in one sentence as straight and explicit as it can be made, and then to drop it forever; yours being to avoid naming it straight, but by dint of breathing and sighing all round and round it, to arouse in the reader who may have had a similar perception already . . . the illusion of a solid object, made . . . wholly out of impalpable materials, air, and the prismatic interference of light, ingeniously focused by mirrors upon empty space. But you do it, that’s the queerness! — William James, letter to his brother Henry James [1907] imagination. . . . To write well and worthily of American things one need even more than elsewhere to be a master.

Letter to Charles Eliot Norton
[January 16, 1871]

It's a complex fate, being an American, and one of the responsibilities it entails is fighting against a superstitious valuation of Europe.

It takes a great deal of history to produce a little literature.
Hawthorne [1879], ch. 1

Whatever question there may be of his [Thoreau’s] talent, there can be none, I think, of his genius. It was a slim and crooked one, but it was eminently personal. He was unperfect, unfinished, inartistic; he was worse than provincial — he was parochial. Ib. 4

The Portrait of a Lady [1881]

The real offense, as she ultimately perceived, was her having a mind of her own at all. Her mind was to be his — attached to his own like a small garden plot to a deer park. Ib.

You were ground in the very mill of the conventional! Ib.

The only reason for the existence of a novel is that it does attempt to represent life. The Art of Fiction [1888]

The only obligation to which in advance we may hold a novel, without incurring the accusation of being arbitrary, is that it be interesting. Ib.

The advantage, the luxury, as well as the torment and responsibility of the novelist, is that there is no limit to what he may attempt as an executant — no limit to his possible experiments, efforts, discoveries, successes.
The Art of Fiction [1908]

The power to guess the unseen from the seen, to trace the implications of things, to judge the whole piece by the pattern, the condition of feeling life in general so completely that you are well on your way to knowing any particular corner of it — this cluster of gifts may almost be said to constitute experience. . . . If experience consists of impressions, it may be said that impressions are experience. . . . Therefore, if I should certainly say to a novice, "Write from experience and experience only," I should feel that this was rather a tantalizing monition if I were not careful immediately to add, "Try to be one of the people on whom nothing is lost." Ib.

We must grant the artist his subject, his idea, his donnée: our criticism is applied only to what he makes of it. . . . If we pretend to respect the artist at all, we must allow him his freedom of choice, in the face, in particular cases, of innumerable presumptions that the choice will not fructify. Art derives a considerable part of its beneficial exercise from flying in the face of presumptions. Ib.

There are few things more exciting to me . . . than a psychological reason. Ib.

The practice of "reviewing" . . . in general has nothing in common with the art of criticism.

Criticism [1893]

The critical sense is so far from frequent that it is absolutely rare, and the possession of the cluster of qualities that minister to it is one of the highest distinctions. . . . In this light one sees the critic as the real helper of the artist, a torchbearing outrider, the interpreter, the brother . . . Just in proportion as he is sentient and restless, just in proportion as he reacts and reciprocates and penetrates, is the critic a valuable instrument.

Criticim

However incumbent it may be on most of us to do our duty, there is, in spite of a thousand narrow dogmatisms, nothing in the world that anyone is under the least obligation to like—not even (one braces one's self to risk the declaration) a particular kind of writing.

Theatreclals: Second Series [1895]

I caught him, yes, I held him—it may be imagined with what passion: but at the end of a minute I began to feel what it truly was that I held. We were alone with the quiet day, and his little heart, dispossessed, had stopped.

The Turn of the Screw [1898], ending

Live all you can; it's a mistake not to. It doesn't so much matter what you do in particular, so long as you have had your life. If you haven't had that what have you had? . . . What one loses one loses; make no mistake about that. . . . The right time is any time that one is still so lucky as to have. . . . Live!

The Ambassadors [1903], bk. V, ch. 2

Really, universally, relations stop nowhere, and the exquisite problem of the artist is eternally but to draw, by a geometry of his own, the circle within which they shall happily appear to do so.

Prefaces [1907–1909]. Roderick Hudson

There is, I think, no more nutritive or suggestive truth . . . than that of the perfect dependence of the "moral" sense of a work of art on the amount of felt life concerned in producing it. The question comes back thus, obviously, to the kind and the degree of the artist's prime sensibility, which is the soil out of which his subject springs.

Prefaces. The Portrait of a Lady

To see deep difficulty braved is at any time, for the really addicted artist, to feel almost even as a pang the beautiful incentive, and to feel it verily in such sort as to wish the danger intensified. The difficulty most worth tackling can only be for him, in these conditions, the greatest the case permits of.

Ib.

Life being all inclusion and confusion, and art being all discrimination and selection, the latter, in search of the hard latent value with which it alone is concerned, sniffs round the mass as instinctively and unerringly as a dog suspicious of some buried bone.

Ib. The Spoils of Poynton

The fatal futility of Fact.

Ib.

No themes are so human as those that reflect for us, out of the confusion of life, the close connection of bliss and bale, of the things that help with the things that hurt, so dangling before us forever that bright hard medal, of so strange an alloy, one face of which is somebody's right and ease and the other somebody's pain and wrong.

Ib. What Maisie Knew

The effort really to see and really to represent is no idle business in face of the constant force that makes for muddle. The great thing is indeed that the muddled state too is one of the very sharpest of the realities, that it also has color and form and character, has often in fact a broad and rich comicality.

Ib.

To criticize is to appreciate, to appropriate, to take intellectual possession, to establish in fine a relation with the criticized thing and to make it one's own.

Ib.

The historian, essentially, wants more documents than he can really use;
the dramatist only wants more liberties than he can really take.

_Letter to Miss M. Betham Edwards_
[January 5, 1912]

We must know, as much as possible, in our beautiful art . . . what we are talking about—and the only way to know is to have lived and loved and cursed and floundered and enjoyed and suffered. I think I don't regret a single "excess" of my responsive youth—I only regret, in my chilled age, certain occasions and possibilities I didn't embrace.

_Letter to Hugh Walpole_
[August 21, 1913]

I still, in presence of life . . . have reactions—as many as possible . . . It's, I suppose, because I am that queer monster, the artist, an obstinate finality, an inexhaustible sensibility. Hence the reactions—appearances, memories, many things, go on playing upon it with consequences that I note and "enjoy" (grim word!) noting. It all takes doing—and I do. I believe I shall do yet again—it is still an act of life.

_Letter to Henry Adams_
[March 21, 1914]

The effect, if not the prime office, of criticism is to make our absorption and our enjoyment of the things that feed the mind as aware of itself as possible, since that awareness quickens the mental demand, which thus in turn wanders further and further for pasture. This action on the part of the mind practically amounts to a reaching out for the reasons of its interest, as only by its ascertaining them can the interest grow more various. This is the very education of our imaginative life.

_The New Novel [1914]_

It is art that makes life, makes interest, makes importance, for our consideration and application of these things, and I know of no substitute whatever for the force and beauty of its process.

_Letter to H. G. Wells_
[July 10, 1915]

The full, the monstrous demonstration that Tennyson was not Tennysonian.

Summer afternoon—summer afternoon; to me those have always been the two most beautiful words in the English language.

_Quoted by Edith Wharton_
in _A Backward Glance_ [1934], ch. 10

To take what there is, and use it, without waiting forever in vain for the preconceived—to dig deep into the actual and get something out of _that_—this doubtless is the right way to live.

No doubt my poetry errs on the side of oddness. I hope in time to have a more balanced and Miltonic style. But as air, melody, is what strikes me most of all in music, and design in painting, so design, pattern, or what I am in the habit of calling inscape is what I above all aim at in poetry. Now it is the virtue of design, pattern, or inscape to be distinctive, and it is the vice of distinctiveness to become queer. This vice I cannot have escaped.

The natural man has only two primal passions, to get and to beget.

The master word [work] . . . is the open sesame to every portal, the great equalizer in the world, the true philosopher’s stone which transmutes all the base metal of humanity into gold.
Ib. 22

Things cannot always go your way. Learn to accept in silence the minor aggravations, cultivate the gift of taciturnity and consume your own smoke  with an extra draught of hard work, so that those about you may not be annoyed with the dust and soot of your complaints.
Ib.

Take the sum of human achievement in action, in science, in art, in literature — subtract the work of the men above forty, and while we should miss great treasures, even priceless treasures, we would practically be where we are today. . . . The effective, moving, vitalizing work of the world is done between the ages of twenty-five and forty.
Ib. 24 [The Fixed Period]

My second fixed idea is the uselessness of men above sixty years of age, and the incalculable benefit it would be in commercial, political, and in professional life, if as a matter of course, men stopped work at this age.

Nothing will sustain you more potently than the power to recognize in your humdrum routine, as perhaps it may be thought, the true poetry of life—the poetry of the commonplace, of the ordinary man, of the plain, toil-worn woman, with their loves and their joys, their sorrows and their griefs.

From Harvey Cushing, Life of Sir William Osler, vol. I, ch. 24 [The Student Life]

I have three personal ideals. One, to do the day's work well and not to bother about tomorrow. . . . The second ideal has been to act the Golden Rule, as far as in me lay, toward my professional brethren and toward the patients committed to my care. And the third has been to cultivate such a measure of equanimity as would enable me to bear success with humility, the affection of my friends without pride, and to be ready when the day of sorrow and grief came to meet it with the courage befitting a man.

IVAN PETROVICH PAVLOV
1849–1936

What can I wish to the youth of my country who devote themselves to science?

Firstly, gradualness. About this most important condition of fruitful scientific work I never can speak without emotion. Gradualness, gradualness and gradualness. From the very beginning of your work, school yourselves to severe gradualness in the accumulation of knowledge.

Learn the ABC of science before you try to ascend to its summit.

Bequest to the Academic Youth of Soviet Russia [1936]

Secondly, modesty. Never think that you already know all. However highly you are appraised, always have the courage to say to yourself—I am ignorant.

Bequest to the Academic Youth of Soviet Russia

Thirdly, passion. Remember that science claims a man's whole life. Had he two lives they would not suffice. Science demands an undivided allegiance from its followers. In your work and in your research there must always be passion.

To protect the workers in their inalienable rights to a higher and better life; to protect them, not only as equals before the law, but also in their health, their homes, their firesides, their liberties as men, as workers, and as citizens; to overcome and conquer prejudices and antagonism; to secure to them the right to life, and the opportunity to maintain that life; the right to be full sharers in the abundance which is the result of their brain and brawn, and the civilization of which they are the founders and the mainstay; to this the workers are entitled. . . . So long as we love we serve; so long as we are loved by others, I would almost say that we are indispensable; and no man is useless while he has a friend.

_Across the Plains_ [1892], Lay Morals

To be honest, to be kind — to earn a little and spend a little less, to make upon the whole a family happier for his presence, to renounce when that shall be necessary and not to be embittered, to keep a few friends, but these without capitulation — above all, on the same grim condition, to keep friends with himself — here is a task for all that a man has of fortitude and delicacy.

_A Christmas Sermon_

If your morals make you dreary, depend upon it, they are wrong. I do not say give them up, for they may be all you have, but conceal them like a vice lest they should spoil the lives of better and simpler people.  _Ib._

Here lies one who meant well, tried a little, failed much: — surely that may be his epitaph of which he need not be ashamed.  _Ib._

Ice and iron cannot be welded.  _Weir of Hermiston_ [1896]

With the selfsame winds that blow.
'Tis the set of sails and not the gales
Which tells us the way to go.

_Winds of Fate_

No! the two kinds of people on earth that I mean
Are the people who lift and the people who lean.  _To Lift or to Lean_

It ever has been since time began,
And ever will be, till time lose breath,
That love is a mood — no more — to man,
And love to woman is life or death. ²

New Introductory Lectures on Psychoanalysis [1932]

One might compare the relation of the ego to the id with that between a rider and his horse. The horse provides the locomotor energy, and the rider has the prerogative of determining the goal and of guiding the movements of his powerful mount towards it. But all too often in the relations between the ego and the id we find a picture of the less ideal situation in which the rider is obliged to guide his horse in the direction in which it itself wants to go.

Ib. Anxiety and Instinctual Life (Lecture 32)

If one wishes to form a true estimate of the full grandeur of religion, one must keep in mind what it undertakes to do for men. It gives them information about the source and origin of the universe, it assures them of protection and final happiness amid the changing vicissitudes of life, and it guides their thoughts and motions by means of precepts which are backed by the whole force of its authority.

New Introductory Lectures on Psychoanalysis. A Philosophy of Life (Lecture 35)

Religion is an attempt to get control over the sensory world, in which we are placed, by means of the wish-world, which we have developed inside us as a result of biological and psychological necessities. Ib.

Religion is an illusion and it derives its strength from the fact that it falls in with our instinctual desires. Ib.

The Mosaic religion had been a Father religion; Christianity became a Son religion. The old God, the Father, took second place; Christ, the Son, stood in His stead, just as in those dark times every son had longed to do.

Moses and Monotheism [1938]

Man found that he was faced with the acceptance of "spiritual" forces, that is to say such forces as cannot be apprehended by the senses, particularly not by sight, and yet having undoubted, even extremely strong, effects. If we may trust to language, it was the movement of the air that provided the image of spirituality, since the spirit borrows its name from the breath of wind (animus, spiritus, Hebrew: ruach = smoke). The idea of the soul was thus born as the spiritual principle in the individual. . . . Now the realm of spirits had opened for man, and he was ready to endow everything in nature with the soul he had discovered in himself.

Ib.

A man who has been the indisputable favorite of his mother keeps for life the feeling of a conqueror, that confidence of success that often induces real success.

A Message to Garcia [March 1899]

The man who is anybody and who does anything is surely going to be criticized, vilified, and misunderstood. This is a part of the penalty for greatness, and every great man understands it;

To such a task we can dedicate our lives and our fortunes, everything that we are and everything that we have, with the pride of those who know that the day has come when America is privileged to spend her blood and her might for the principles that gave her birth and happiness and the peace which she has treasured. Conspicuous consumption of valuable goods is a means of reputeability to the gentleman of leisure.

The Theory of the Leisure Class [1899], ch. 4

With the exception of the instinct of self-preservation, the propensity for emulation is probably the strongest and most alert and persistent of the economic motives proper.

Ib. 5

The requirement of conspicuous wastefulness is not commonly present, consciously, in our canons of taste, but it is none the less present as a constraining norm selectively shaping and sustaining our sense of what is beautiful, and guiding our discrimination with respect to what may legitimately be approved as beautiful and what may not.

Ib. 6

Priestly vestments show, in accentuated form, all the features that have been shown to be evidence of a servile status and a vicarious life.

Ib. 7

The dog . . . commends himself to our favor by affording play to our propensity for mastery, and as he is also an item of expense, and commonly serves no industrial purpose, he holds a well-assured place in men’s regard as a thing of good repute.

Ib.

The adoption of the cap and gown is one of the striking atavistic features of modern college life.

Ib. 14

The classics have scarcely lost in absolute value as a voucher of scholastic respectability, since for this purpose it is only necessary that the scholar should be able to put in evidence some learning which is conventionally recognized as evidence of wasted time.

1858–1915
Aesthetic emotion puts man in a state favorable to the reception of erotic emotion. Art is the accomplice of love. Take love away and there is no longer art.

Décadence1
It is because peoples do not know each other that they hate each other so little.

If we seek merely swollen, slothful ease and ignoble peace, if we shrink from the hard contests where men must win at the hazard of their lives and at the risk of all they hold dear, then bolder and stronger peoples will pass us by, and will win for themselves the domination of the world. Ib.

The Universe in the Light of Modern Physics [1931]

Anybody who has been seriously engaged in scientific work of any kind realizes that over the entrance to the gates of the temple of science are written the words: Ye must have faith. It is a quality which the scientist cannot dispense with.

Where Is Science Going? [1932]

An important scientific innovation rarely makes its way by gradually winning over and converting its opponents: it rarely happens that Saul becomes Paul. What does happen is that its opponents gradually die out and that the growing generation is familiarized with the idea from the beginning.

Message to Congress [December 3, 1907]

The object of government is the welfare of the people. The material progress and prosperity of a nation are desirable chiefly so far as they lead to the moral and material welfare of all good citizens.

We stand equally against government by a plutocracy and government by a mob. There is something to be said for government by a great aristocracy which has furnished leaders to the nation in peace and war for generations; even a democrat like myself must admit this. But there is absolutely nothing to be said for government by a plutocracy, for government by men very powerful in certain lines and gifted with "the money touch," but with ideals which in their essence are merely those of so many glorified pawnbrokers.

The writers of popular fiction seem to have taken as their guiding principle the dictum that the essence of the novel lies in the expression of the approved moral sentiments. They accordingly erect a framework of morality into which they attempt to force their plots.

The Essence of the Novel [1885]

The indiscriminate readers throughout the country also must shoulder their share of the blame. It has long been the custom in Japan to consider the novel as an instrument of education . . . . In actual practice, however, only stories of bloodthirsty cruelty or else of pornography are welcomed.

again on July 14.
2 The remark has also been attributed to General Pershing, who in My Experiences in the ing said “anything so splendid.” However Naboth Hedin, one of the uniformed American correspondents present upon the July 4, 1917, the phrase three weeks earlier, on June 14, his second day in Paris:

“Pershing stepped up to it [Lafayette’s grave]

in a loud voice, ‘Lafayette, we are here.’ I was about twenty feet away” [letter from Naboth

Know you what it is to be a child? It is to be something very different from the man of today. It is to have a spirit yet streaming from the waters of baptism; it is to believe in love, to believe in loveliness, to believe in belief; it is to be so little that the elves can reach to whisper in your ear; it is to turn pumpkins into coaches, and mice into horses, lowness into loftiness, and nothing into everything, for each child has its fairy godmother in its soul.

ALFRED NORTH WHITEHEAD
1861—1947

The study of mathematics is apt to commence in disappointment. . . . We are told that by its aid the stars are weighed and the billions of molecules in a drop of water are counted. Yet, like the ghost of Hamlet’s father, this great science eludes the efforts of our mental weapons to grasp it.

An Introduction to Mathematics [1911]

All the world over and at all times there have been practical men, absorbed in irreducible and stubborn facts; all the world over and at all times there have been men of philosophic temperament, who have been absorbed in the weaving of general principles.

There are no whole truths; all truths are half-truths. It is trying to treat them as whole truths that plays the devil.

The vitality of thought is in adventure. Ideas won’t keep. Something must be done about them. When the idea is new, its custodians have fervor, live for it, and, if need be, die for it.

Ib. p. 100

Intelligence is quickness to apprehend as distinct from ability, which is capacity to act wisely on the thing apprehended.

Ib. p. 135

Our minds are finite, and yet even in these circumstances of finitude we are surrounded by possibilities that are infinite, and the purpose of human life is to grasp as much as we can out of that infinitude.

Ib. p. 163

A culture is in its finest flower before it begins to analyze itself.

The ideas of Freud were popularized by people who only imperfectly understood them, who were incapable of the great effort required to grasp them in their relationship to larger truths, and who therefore assigned to them a prominence out of all proportion to their true importance.

Ib. p. 212

Art is the imposing of a pattern on experience, and our aesthetic enjoyment in recognition of the pattern.

Ib. p. 228

A philosopher of imposing stature doesn’t think in a vacuum. Even his most abstract ideas are, to some extent, conditioned by what is or is not known in the time when he lives.

We are under a Constitution, but the Constitution is what the judges say it is, and the judiciary is the safeguard of our liberty and of our property under the Constitution.

_Speech at Elmira, New York [May 3, 1907_

How amazing it is that, in the midst of controversies on every conceivable subject, one should expect unanimity of opinion upon difficult legal questions! In the highest ranges of thought, in theology, philosophy and science, we find differences of view on the part of the most distinguished experts—philosophers, philosophers and scientists. The history of scholarship is a record of disagreements. And when we deal with questions relating to principles of law and their applications, we do not suddenly rise into a stratosphere of icy certainty.

_Speech to the American Law Institute [May 7, 1936_

The greater the importance of safeguarding the community from incitements to the overthrow of our institutions by force and violence, the more imperative is the need to preserve inviolate the constitutional rights of free

Trivia [1902]. Green Ivory

There are two things to aim at in life: first, to get what you want; and, after that, to enjoy it. Only the wisest of mankind achieve the second.

Afterthoughts [1931]

Happiness is a wine of the rarest vintage, and seems insipid to a vulgar taste.

How awful to reflect that what people say of us is true!

Solvency is entirely a matter of temperament and not of income.

It is almost always worth while to be cheated; people's little frauds have an interest which more than repays what they cost us.

When they come downstairs from their Ivory Towers, idealists are apt to walk straight into the gutter.

The indefatigable pursuit of an unattainable perfection, even though it consist in nothing more than in the pounding of an old piano, is what alone gives a meaning to our life on this unavailing star.

Eat with the rich, but go to the play with the poor, who are capable of joy.

I will arise and go now, and go to Innisfree,
And a small cabin build there, of clay and wattles made:
Nine bean-rows will I have there, a hive for the honeybee,
And live alone in the bee-loud glade.

And I shall have some peace there, for peace comes dropping slow,
Dropping from the veils of the morning to where the cricket sings;
There midnight's all a glimmer, and noon a purple glow,

And Agamemnon dead.

Leda and the Swan [1928]

O chestnut tree, great rooted blossomer,
Are you the leaf, the blossom or the bole?
O body swayed to music, O brightening glance,
How can we know the dancer from the dance?

Among School Children [1928], st. 8

Never to have lived is best, ancient writers say;
Never to have drawn the breath of life, never to have looked into the eye of day
The second best's a gay goodnight and quickly turn away.1

From "Oedipus at Colonus," st. 3

The innocent and the beautiful
Have no enemy but time.

In Memory of Eva Gore-booth and Con Markiewicz [1933]

My Self: A living man is blind and drinks his drop.
What matter if the ditches are impure?
What matter if I live it all once more?
Endure that toil of growing up?
The ignominy of boyhood; the distress
Of boyhood changing into man;
The unfinished man and his pain

Brought face to face with his own clumsiness.

A Dialogue of Self and Soul [1933], II, st. 1

I am content to live it all again
And yet again, if it be life to pitch
Into the frog-spawn of a blind man’s ditch.

Ib. st. 3

When such as I cast out remorse
So great a sweetness flows into the breast
We must laugh and we must sing,
Everything we look upon is blest.

Ib. st. 4

But what is Whiggery?
A level, rancorous, rational sort of mind
That never looked out of the eye of a saint
Or out of a drunkard’s eye.

The Seven Sages [1933]

No man has ever lived that had enough
Of children’s gratitude or woman’s love.

Vacillation [1933], st. 3

Swift has sailed into his rest;
Savage indignation there
Cannot lacerate his breast,
Imitate him if you dare,
World-besotted traveler; he Served human liberty.

Swift’s Epitaph ¹ [1933]

The intellect of man is forced to choose
Perfection of the life, or of the work,
And if it take the second must refuse
A heavenly mansion, raging in the dark.

The Choice [1933], st. 1

But Love has pitched his mansion in
The place of excrement.

Crazy Jane Talks with the Bishop [1933], st. 3

What were all the world’s alarms
To mighty Paris when he found
Sleep upon a golden bed
That first dawn in Helen’s arms?

Speech after long silence; it is right,
All other lovers being estranged or dead . . .

That we descant and yet again descant
Upon the supreme theme of Art and Song:
Bodily decrepitude is wisdom; young
We loved each other and were ignorant.

Words for Music Perhaps. After Long Silence

I carry the sun in a golden cup,
The moon in a silver bag.

Ib. Those Dancing Days Are Gone, refrain

I gave what other women gave
That stepped out of their clothes,
But when this soul, its body off,
Naked to naked goes,
He it has found shall find therein
What none other knows.

A Woman Young and Old [1933]. A Last Confession, st. 3

He that sings a lasting song
Thinks in a marrowbone.

A Prayer for Old Age [1935], st. 1

I pray — for fashion’s word is out
And prayer comes round again —
That I may seem, though I die old,
A foolish, passionate man.

Ib. st. 3

All perform their tragic play,
There struts Hamlet, there is Lear.

Lapis Lazuli [1936–1939]

Heaven blazing into the head:
Tragedy wrought to its uttermost.
Though Hamlet rambles and Lear rages,
And all the drop-scenes drop at once
Upon a hundred thousand stages,
It cannot grow by an inch or an ounce.

If soul may look and body touch,
Which is the more blest?

The Lady’s Second Song [1936–1939], st. 3

My temptation is quiet.
Here at life’s end
Neither loose imagination,
Nor the mill of the mind
Consuming its rat and bone,
Can make the truth known.

An Acre of Grass [1936–1939], st. 2

Grant me an old man’s frenzy,
Myself must I remake
Till I am Timon and Lear
Or that William Blake
Who beat upon the wall
Till Truth obeyed his call. Ib. st. 3

Hurrah for revolution and more cannon-shot!
A beggar upon horseback lashes a beggar on foot.

The Great Day [1936–1939], l. 1

You think it horrible that lust and rage
Should dance attention upon my old age;
They were not such a plague when I was young;
What else have I to spur me into song?

The Spur [1936–1939]

Down the mountain walls
From where Pan’s cavern is Intolerable music falls.
Foul goat-head, brutal arm appear,
Belly, shoulder, bum,
Flash fishlike, nymphs and satyrs
Copulate in the foam.

News for the Delphic Oracle
[1936–1939], st. 3

What shall I do for pretty girls
Now my old bawd is dead?

John Kinsella’s Lament for Mrs. Mary Moore [1936–1939], refrain

Irish poets, learn your trade,
Sing whatever is well made.

Under Ben Bulben [1936–1939], V

Under bare Ben Bulben’s head
In Drumcliff churchyard Yeats is laid. Ib. VI

On limestone quarried near the spot
By his command these words are cut:

Cast a cold eye
On life, on death.
Horsman, pass by!

Under Ben Bulben, V

The friends that have it I do wrong
When ever I remake a song
Should know what issue is at stake,
It is myself that I remake.

decided upon the Program of Revolution and defined the procedure of the revolution in three stages. The first is the period of military government; the second, the period of political tutelage; and the third, the period of constitutional government.

The Three Phases of National Reconstruction [1918]

The Chinese people have only family and clan solidarity; they do not have national spirit . . . ; they are just a heap of loose sand. . . . Other men are the carving knife and serving dish; we are the fish and the meat.

China As a Heap of Loose Sand [1924]

China is now suffering from poverty, not from unequal distribution of wealth. Where there are inequalities of wealth, the methods of Marx can, of course, be used; a class war can be advocated to destroy the inequalities. But in China, where industry is not yet developed, Marx's class war and dictatorship of the proletariat are impracticable. Capital and the State [1924]

Herein lies the tragedy of the age: not that men are poor—all men know something of poverty; not that men are wicked—who is good? Not that men are ignorant—what is truth? Nay, but that men know so little of men.
The Souls of Black Folk [1903]

It is a peculiar sensation, this double-consciousness, this sense of always looking at one's self through the eyes of others. . . . One feels his two-ness—an American, a Negro; two souls, two thoughts, two unreconciled strivings; two warring ideals in one dark body, whose dogged strength alone keeps it from being torn asunder.

If Parson lost his senses
And people came to theirs,
And he and they together
Knelt down with angry prayers
For tamed and shabby tigers
And dancing dogs and bears,
And wretched, blind pit ponies,
And little hunted hares.

But oh, the den of wild things in
The darkness of her eyes!

_Gypsy Girl_

No less than laboring seas.

_A Wood Song_

Time, you old gypsy man,
Will you not stay,
Put up your caravan
Just for one day?

_Time, You Old Gypsy Man, st. 1_

Pity him, this fallen chief,
All his splendor, all his strength,
All his beauty's breadth and length
Dwindled down with shame and grief,
Half the bull he was before,
Bones and leather, nothing more.

_Bull_

Oh, had our simple Eve
Seen through the make-believe!
Had she but known the Pretender he was!
Out of the boughs he came,
Whispering still her name,
Tumbling in twenty rings
Into the grass.

How they all pitied
Poor motherless Eve!

I climbed the hill as light fell short,
And rooks came home in scramble sort.

_Song of Honor_

I stood upon that silent hill
And stared into the sky until My eyes were blind with stars and still
I stared into the sky.

_REASON, st. 7_

Reason has moons, but moons not hers
Lie mirrored on her sea,
Confounding her astronomers,
But O! delighting me.

I saw with open eyes
Singing birds sweet
Sold in the shops
For the people to eat,
Sold in the shops of Stupidity Street.

I saw in vision
The worm in the wheat,
And in the shops nothing
For people to eat;
Nothing for sale in Stupidity Street.

When from a long distant past nothing subsists, after the people are dead, after the things are broken and scattered, still, alone, more fragile, but with more vitality, more unsubstantial, more persistent, more faithful, the smell and taste of things remain poised a long time, like souls, ready to remind us, waiting and hoping for their moment, amid the ruins of all the rest; and bear unaltering, in the tiny and almost impalpable drop of their essence, the vast structure of recollection.

Remembrance of Things Past 1

Of the skin he made him mittens,

Made them with the skin side outside,
He, to get the warm side inside,
Put the inside skin side outside;
He, to get the cold side outside,
Put the warm side fur side inside.

Why he put the skin side outside,
Why he turned them inside outside—Anonymous, The Modern Hiawatha

we do not pause to reflect that, even without waiting for that other life, in this life, after a few years we are unfaithful to what we have been, to what we wished to remain immortally.

Remembrance of Things Past.
Cities of the Plain, pt. II

It is often simply from want of the creative spirit that we do not go to the full extent of suffering. And the most terrible reality brings us, with our suffering, the joy of a great discovery, because it merely gives a new and clear form to what we have long been rumi-nating without suspecting it.  Ib.

The bonds that unite another person to ourself exist only in our mind. Memory as it grows fainter relaxes them, and notwithstanding the illusion by which we would fain be cheated and with which, out of love, friendship, politeness, deference, duty, we cheat other people, we exist alone. Man is the creature that cannot emerge from himself, that knows his fellows only in himself;
when he asserts the contrary, he is lying.  Ib. The Sweet Cheat Gone

We do not succeed in changing things according to our desire, but gradually our desire changes. The situation that we hoped to change because it was intolerable becomes unimportant.
We have not managed to surmount the obstacle, as we were absolutely determined to do, but life has taken us round it, led us past it, and then if we turn round to gaze at the remote past, we can barely catch sight of it, so imperceptible has it become.  Ib.

There is not a woman in the world the possession of whom is as precious as that of the truths which she reveals to us by causing us to suffer.  Ib.

We are healed of a suffering only by experiencing it to the full.  Ib.

Happiness is beneficial for the body but it is grief that develops the powers of the mind.

Ib. The Past Recaptured

Only through art can we get outside of ourselves and know another’s view of the universe which is not the same as ours and see landscapes which would otherwise have remained unknown to us like the landscapes of the moon.
Thanks to art, instead of seeing a single world, our own, we see it multiply until we have before us as many worlds as there are original artists. . . . And many centuries after their core, whether we call it Rembrandt or Vermeer, is extinguished, they continue to send us their special rays.

You may ask what then will become of the fundamental principles of equity and fair play which our constitutions enshrine; and whether I seriously believe that unsupported they will serve merely as counsels of moderation. I do not think that anyone can say what will be left of those principles; I do not know whether they will serve only as counsels; but this much I think I do know — that a society so riven that the spirit of moderation is gone, no court can save; that a society where that spirit flourishes, no court need save; that in a society which evades its responsibility by thrusting upon the courts the nurture of that spirit, that spirit in the end will perish.

It appears to me that in Ethics, as in all other philosophical studies, the difficulties and disagreements, of which history is full, are mainly due to a very simple cause: namely to the attempt to answer questions, without first discovering precisely what question it is which you desire to answer.

Roving Commission: My Early Life [1930]

It is a good thing for an uneducated man to read books of quotations. Bartlett's Familiar Quotations is an admirable work, and I studied it intensly. The quotations when engraved upon the memory give you good thoughts. They also make you anxious to read the authors and look for more.

Come on now, all you young men, all over the world. You are needed more than ever now to fill the gap of a generation shorn by the war. You have not an hour to lose. You must take your places in life's fighting line. Twenty to twenty-five! These are the years! Don't be content with things as they are. "The earth is yours and the fullness thereof." Enter upon your inheritance, accept your responsibilities. Raise the glorious flags again, advance them upon the new enemies, who constantly gather upon the front of the human army, and have only to be assaulted to be overthrown. Don't take no for an answer, never submit to failure. Do not be fobbed off with mere personal success or acceptance. You will make all kinds of mistakes; but as long as you are generous and true, and also fierce, you cannot hurt the world or even seriously distress her. She was made to be wooed and won by youth.

Scenes from the Mesozoic

It is possible that our race may be an accident, in a meaningless universe, living its brief life uncared for, on this dark, cooling star; but even so — and all the more — what marvelous creatures we are! What fairy story, what tale from the Arabian Nights of the jinns, is a hundredth part as wonderful as this true fairy story of simians! It is so much more heartening, too, than the tales we invent. A universe capable of giving birth to many such accidents is — blind or not — a good world to live in, a promising universe. . . . We once thought we lived on God’s footstool; it may be a throne.1

This Simian World [1920]. XIX

Father declared he was going to buy a new plot in the cemetery, a plot all for himself. “And I’ll buy one on a corner,” he added triumphantly, “where I can get out!”

Mother looked at him, startled but admiring, and whispered to me, “I almost believe he could do it.”

We can only pay our debt to the past

Address to the people of Canada, on the coronation of George VI
[May 12, 1937]

He [Raymond Asquith] disliked emotion, not because he felt lightly but because he felt deeply. He most sincerely loved his country, but he loved her too much to identify her with the pasteboard goddess of the music halls and the hustings. . . . Austerely self-respecting, he had been used to hide his devotions under a mask of indifference, and would never reveal them except in deeds.

Our roll of honor is long, but it holds no nobler figure. He will stand to those of us who are left as an incarnation of the spirit of the land he loved. . . . He loved his youth, and his youth has become eternal.

Pilgrim's Way [1940]

Democracy — the essential thing as distinguished from this or that democratic government — was primarily an attitude of mind, a spiritual testament, and not an economic structure or a political machine. The testament involved certain basic beliefs — that the personality was sacrosanct, which was the meaning of liberty; that policy should be settled by free discussion; that normally a minority should be ready to yield to a majority, which in turn should respect a minority's sacred things.

Public life is regarded as the crown of a career, and to young men it is the worthiest ambition. Politics is still the greatest and the most honorable adventure.

CARL GUSTAV JUNG
1875-1961

The dynamic principle of fantasy is play, which belongs also to the child, and as such it appears to be inconsistent with the principle of serious work. But without this playing with fantasy no creative work has ever yet come to birth. The debt we owe to the play of imagination is incalculable.

Psychological Types [1923], ch. 1, p. 82

The great problems of life — sexuality, of course, among others — are always related to the primordial images of the collective unconscious. These images are really balancing or compensating factors which correspond with the problems life presents in actuality. This is not to be marveled at, since these images are deposits representing the accumulated experience of thousands of years of struggle for adaptation and existence.

Ib. ch. 5, p. 271

We should not pretend to understand the world only by the intellect; we apprehend it just as much by feeling. Therefore the judgment of the intellect is, at best, only the half of truth, and must, if it be honest, also come to an understanding of its inadequacy.

Ib. conclusion, p. 628

The woman is increasingly aware that love alone can give her her full stature, just as the man begins to discern that spirit alone can endow his life with its highest meaning. Fundamentally, therefore, both seek a psychic relation one to the other, because love needs the spirit, and the spirit love, for their fulfillment.

Contributions to Analytical Psychology [1928], p. 185

Seldom, or perhaps never, does a marriage develop into an individual relationship smoothly and without crises; there is no coming to consciousness without pain.

Contributions to Analytical Psychology, p. 193

In studying the history of the human mind one is impressed again and again by the fact that the growth of the mind is the widening of the range of consciousness, and that each step forward has been a most painful and laborious achievement.

Ib. p. 340

The meeting of two personalities is like the contact of two chemical substances: if there is any reaction, both are transformed.

Modern Man in Search of a Soul [1933], p. 57

The great decisions of human life have as a rule far more to do with the instincts and other mysterious unconscious factors than with conscious will and well-meaning reasonableness. The shoe that fits one person pinches another: there is no recipe for living that suits all cases. Each of us carries his own life-form — an indeterminable form which cannot be superseded by any other.

Ib. p. 69

Aging people should know that their lives are not mounting and unfolding but that an inexorable inner process forces the contraction of life. For a young person it is almost a sin — and certainly a danger — to be too much occupied with himself; but for the aging person it is a duty and a necessity to give serious attention to himself.

Ib. p. 125

All ages before ours believed in gods in some form or other. Only an unparalleled impoverishment in symbolism could enable us to rediscover the gods as psychic factors, which is to say, as archetypes of the unconscious. No doubt this discovery is hardly credible as yet.

The Integration of the Personality [1939], p. 72
If there is anything that we wish to change in the child, we should first examine it and see whether it is not something that could better be changed in ourselves.

The Integration of the Personality, p. 285

The conscious mind allows itself to be trained like a parrot, but the unconscious does not—which is why St. Augustine thanked God for not making him responsible for his dreams.

Psychology and Alchemy [1953], p. 51

The unconscious is not just evil by nature, it is also the source of the highest good: not only dark but also light, not only bestial, semihuman, and demonic but superhuman, spiritual, and, in the classical sense of the word, "divine."

The Practice of Psychotherapy [1953], p. 364

The little world of childhood with its familiar surroundings is a model of the greater world. The more intensively the family has stamped its character upon the child, the more it will tend to feel and see its earlier miniature world again in the bigger world of adult life. Naturally this is not a conscious, intellectual process.

From Psychological Reflections: A Jung Anthology [1953], p. 83; Collected Works, vol. 4 The Theory of Psychoanalysis [1913]

This whole creation is essentially subjective, and the dream is the theater where the dreamer is at once scene, actor, prompter, stage manager, author, audience, and critic.

Ib. p. 58; vol. 8, General Aspects of Dream Psychology [1928]

The dream is the small hidden door in the deepest and most intimate sanctum of the soul, which opens into that primeval cosmic night that was soul long before there was a conscious ego and will be soul far beyond what a conscious ego could ever reach.

Emotion is the chief source of all becoming-conscious. There can be no transforming of darkness into light and of apathy into movement without emotion.

Ib. p. 32: vol. 9, Psychological Aspects of the Modern Archetype [1938]

No one can flatter himself that he is immune to the spirit of his own epoch, or even that he possesses a full understanding of it. Irrespective of our conscious convictions, each one of us, without exception, being a particle of the general mass, is somewhere attached to, colored by, or even undermined by the spirit which goes through the mass. Freedom stretches only as far as the limits of our consciousness.

Ib. p. 143: vol. 15, Paracelsus the Physician [1942]

Where love rules, there is no will to power; and where power predominates, there love is lacking. The one is the shadow of the other.

Ib. p. 87: vol. 7, The Psychology of the Unconscious [1943]

The erotic instinct is something questionable, and will always be so whatever a future set of laws may have to say on the matter. It belongs, on the one hand, to the original animal nature of man, which will exist as long as man has an animal body. On the other hand, it is connected with the highest forms of the spirit. But it blooms only when spirit and instinct are in true harmony. If one or the other aspect is missing, then an injury occurs, or at least there is a one-sided lack of balance which easily slips into the pathological. Too much of the animal disfigures the civilized human being, too much culture makes a sick animal.

Space, like time, engenders forgetfulness; but it does so by setting us bodily free from our surroundings and giving us back our primitive, unattached state... Time, we say, is Lethe; but change of air is a similar draught, and, if it works less thoroughly, does so more quickly.

Hold fast the time! Guard it, watch over it, every hour, every minute! Unregarded it slips away, like a lizard, smooth, slippery, faithless, a pixy wife. Hold every moment sacred. Give each clarity and meaning, each the weight of thine awareness, each its true and due fulfillment.

Late on the third day, at the very moment when, at sunset, we were making our way through a herd of hippopotamuses, there flashed upon my mind, unforeseen and unsought, the phrase, "Reverence for Life." Now I had found my way to the idea in which affirmation of the world and ethics are contained side by side; now I knew that the ethical acceptance of the world and of life, together with the ideals of civilization contained in this concept, has a foundation in thought.
Out of My Life and Thought [1949]
Affirmation of life is the spiritual act by which man ceases to live unreflectively and begins to devote himself to his life with reverence in order to raise it to its true value. To affirm life is to deepen, to make more inward, and to exalt the will to live.

The scientist takes off from the manifold observations of predecessors, and shows his intelligence, if any, by his ability to discriminate between the important and the negligible, by selecting here and there the significant stepping-stones that will lead across the difficulties to new understanding. The one who places the last stone and steps across to the terra firma of accomplished discovery gets all the credit. Only the initiated know and honor those whose patient integrity and devotion to exact observation have made the last step possible.¹

Statement of the mass-energy equivalence relationship.¹

The most beautiful thing we can experience is the mysterious. It is the source of all true art and science.
"What I Believe," in Forum
[October 1930]

It is not enough that you should understand about applied science in order that your work may increase man’s blessings. Concern for man himself and his fate must always form the chief interest of all technical endeavors, concern for the great unsolved problems of the organization of labor and the distribution of goods — in order that the creations of our mind shall be a blessing and not a curse to mankind. Never forget this in the midst of your diagrams and equations.
Address, California Institute of Technology [1931]

The whole of science is nothing more than a refinement of everyday thinking.
Physics and Reality [1936]

Physical concepts are free creations of the human mind, and are not, however it may seem, uniquely determined by the external world.
Evolution of Physics [1938]

The original statement is: If a body gives off the energy \( \mathcal{L} \) in the form of radiation, its mass diminishes by \( \mathcal{L}/c^2 \).—Ist die Tragheit eines Körpers von seinem Energiesinhalt abhängig? [1905]

Some recent work by E. Fermi and L. Szilard, which has been communicated to me in manuscript, leads me to expect that the element uranium may be turned into a new and important source of energy in the immediate future. Certain aspects of the situation which has arisen seem to call for watchfulness and, if necessary, quick action on the part of the Administration.
Letter to President Franklin D. Roosevelt [August 2, 1939] (the letter which resulted in assignment of government funds for development of the atom bomb)

This new phenomena [atomic energy] would also lead to the construction of bombs. . . . A single bomb of this type, carried by boat and exploded in a port, might very well destroy the whole port, together with some of the surrounding territory. However, such bombs might very well prove to be too heavy for transportation by air. Ib.

As long as there are sovereign nations possessing great power, war is inevitable.

Einstein on the Atomic Bomb
[Atlantic Monthly, November 1945]

I do not believe that civilization will be wiped out in a war fought with the atomic bomb. Perhaps two thirds of the people of the earth might be killed, but enough men capable of thinking, and enough books, would be left to start again, and civilization could be restored.
Ib.

Since I do not foresee that atomic energy is to be a great boon for a long time, I have to say that for the present it is a menace. Perhaps it is well that it should be. It may intimidate the human race into bringing order into its international affairs, which, without the pressure of fear, it would not do. Ib.

I shall never believe that God plays dice with the world.¹

Inscription in Fine Hall, Princeton University

Every intellectual who is called before one of the committees ought to refuse to testify, i.e., he must be prepared . . . for the sacrifice of his personal welfare in the interest of the cultural welfare of his country . . . This kind of inquisition violates the spirit of the Constitution.

If enough people are ready to take this grave step they will be successful. If not, then the intellectuals of this country deserve nothing better than the slavery which is intended for them.

Letter to William Frauenglass

The unleashed power of the atom has changed everything save our modes of thinking, and we thus drift toward unparalleled catastrophes.

Our defense is not in armaments, nor in science, nor in going underground. Our defense is in law and order.

Railway termini . . . are our gates to the glorious and the unknown. Through them we pass out into adventure and sunshine, to them, alas! we return. Only connect! That was the whole of her sermon. Only connect the prose and the passion, and both will be exalted, and human love will be seen at its height. Live in fragments no longer. Only connect, and the beast and the monk, robbed of the isolation that is life to either, will die. Ib.

The echo began in some indescribable way to undermine her hold on life. Coming at a moment when she chanced to be fatigued, it had managed to murmur, "Pathos, piety, courage—they exist, but are identical, and so is filth. Everything exists, nothing has value." The king of the sea, with his whiskers of weed and his trident and dolphins, truly represents the main and gives it character. A Note on Poetry [1937]

What makes the poet the potent figure that he is, or was, or ought to be, is that he creates the world to which we turn incessantly and without knowing it and that he gives to life the supreme fictions without which we are unable to conceive of it.
The Noble Rider and the Sound of Words [1942]

Each man resembles all other men, each woman resembles all other women, this year resembles last year.
The beginning of time will, no doubt, resemble the end of time. One world is said to resemble another.
Three Academic Pieces [1947]

Poetry is poetry, and one’s objective as a poet is to achieve poetry precisely as one’s objective in music is to achieve music. There are poets who would regard that as a scandal and who would say that a poem which had no importance except its importance as poetry had no importance at all, and that a poet who had no objective except to achieve poetry was a fribble and something less than a man of reason.

The unfailing formula for production of morale is patriotism, self-respect, discipline, and self-confidence within a military unit, joined with fair treatment and merited appreciation from without. It cannot be produced by pampering or coddling an army, and is not necessarily destroyed by hardship, danger, or even calamity. Though it can survive and develop in adversity that comes as an inescapable incident of service, it will quickly wither and die if soldiers come to believe themselves the victims of indifference or injustice on the part of their government, or of ignorance, personal ambition, or ineptitude on the part of their military leaders.

If man does find the solution for world peace it will be the most revolutionary reversal of his record we have ever known.

Our policy is directed not against any country or doctrine but against hunger, poverty, desperation and chaos. Its purpose should be the revival of a working economy in the world so as to permit the emergence of political and social conditions in which free institutions can exist.

POPE JOHN XXIII
[ANGELO GIUSEPPE RONCALLI]
1881–1963

The social progress, order, security and peace of each country are necessarily connected with the social progress, order, security and peace of all other countries.

At the present day no political community is able to pursue its own interests and develop itself in isolation, because the degree of its prosperity and development is a reflection and a component part of the degree of prosperity and development of all other political communities.

Pacem in Terris
[Encyclical letter, April 11, 1963]

There exists an intrinsic connection between the common good on the one hand and the structure and function of public authority on the other. The moral order, which needs public authority in order to promote the common good in human society, requires also that the authority be effective in attaining that end. . . .

Today the universal common good poses problems of world-wide dimensions, which cannot be adequately tackled or solved except by the efforts of public authorities endowed with a wideness of power, structure and means of the same proportions: that is, of public authorities which are in a position to operate in an effective manner on a world-wide basis. The moral order itself, therefore, demands that such a form of public authority be established.

An act of the highest importance performed by the United Nations Organization was the universal Declaration of Human Rights, approved in the General Assembly of December 10, 1948. . . . The document represents an important step on the path towards the juridical-political organization of the world community. For in it, in most solemn form, the dignity of a person is acknowledged to all human beings; and as a consequence there is proclaimed, as a fundamental right, the right of free movement in search for truth and in the attainment of moral good and of justice, and also the right to a dignified life.

Pacem in Terris

The representative of the highest spiritual authority of the earth is glad, indeed boasts, of being the son of a humble but robust and honest laborer.

PABLO PICASSO
1881–

For me, a painting is a dramatic action in the course of which reality finds itself split apart. For me, that dramatic action takes precedence over all other considerations. The pure plastic act is only secondary as far as I'm concerned. What counts is the drama of that plastic act, the moment at which the universe comes out of itself and meets its own destruction.

From Françoise Gilot and Carlton Lake, Life With Picasso [1964], pt. I

When I was a child, my mother said to me, "If you become a soldier you'll be a general. If you become a monk you'll end up as the Pope." Instead I became a painter and wound up as Picasso.

If there were no internal propensity to unite, even at a prodigiously rudimentary level — indeed in the molecule itself — it would be physically impossible for love to appear higher up, with us, in “hominized” form. . . . Driven by the forces of love, the fragments of the world seek each other so that the world may come into being.

The Phenomenon of Man [1955], bk. IV, ch. 2, sec. 2

Love alone is capable of uniting living beings in such a way as to complete and fulfill them, for it alone takes them and joins them by what is deepest in themselves. . . . Does not love every instant achieve all around us, in the couple or the team, the magic feat . . . of “personalizing” by totalizing? And if that is what it can achieve daily on a small scale, why should it not repeat this one day on world-wide dimensions?

The end of the world: the wholesale internal introversion upon itself of the noosphere, which has simultaneously reached the uttermost limit of its com-plexity and its centrality. . . . the overthrow of equilibrium, detaching the mind, fulfilled at last, from its material matrix, so that it will henceforth rest with all its weight on God-Omega. . . . critical point simultaneously of emergence and emersion, of maturation and evasion.

It is one thing for the human mind to extract from the phenomena of nature the laws which it has itself put into them; it may be a far harder thing to extract laws over which it has no control. JACQUES MARITAIN
1882–
In the modern social order, the person is sacrificed to the individual. The individual is given universal suffrage, equality of rights, freedom of opinion; while the person, isolated, naked, with no social armor to sustain and protect him, is left to the mercy of all the devouring forces which threaten the life of the soul, exposed to relentless actions and reactions of conflicting interests and appetites. . . . It is a homicidal civilization.

These unhappy times call for the building of plans . . . that build from the bottom up and not from the top down, that put their faith once more in the forgotten man at the bottom of the economic pyramid.
Radio address [April 7, 1932]

The country needs and, unless I mistake its temper, the country demands bold, persistent experimentation. It is common sense to take a method and try it. If it fails, admit it frankly and try another. But above all, try something.

I am not for a return to that definition of liberty under which for many years a free people were being gradually regimented into the service of the privileged few. Second Inaugural Address [January 20, 1937]

I see one-third of a nation ill-housed, ill-clad, ill-nourished.

Ib.

The test of our progress is not whether we add more to the abundance of those who have much; it is whether we provide enough for those who have too little.

Ib.

The epidemic of world lawlessness is spreading. When an epidemic of physical disease starts to spread, the community approves and joins in a quarantine of the patients in order to protect the health of the community against the spread of the disease. . . . The will for peace on the part of peace-loving nations must express itself to the end that nations that may be tempted to violate their agreements and the rights of others will desist from such a course. There must be positive endeavors to preserve peace.

Speech, Chicago¹ [October 5, 1937]

War is a contagion. ²

History proves that dictatorships do not grow out of strong and successful governments, but out of weak and helpless ones. If by democratic methods people get a government strong enough to protect them from fear and starvation, their democracy succeeds; but if they do not, they grow impatient. Therefore, the only sure bulwark of continuing liberty is a government strong enough to protect the interests of the people, and a people strong enough and well enough informed to maintain its sovereign control over its government.

in the world. The second is freedom of every person to worship God in his own way — everywhere in the world. The third is freedom from want ... everywhere in the world. The fourth is freedom from fear ... anywhere in the world.1

Message to Congress [January 6, 1941]

One great difference which has characterized this division [between liberal and conservative parties] has been that the liberal party — no matter what its particular name was at the time — believed in the wisdom and efficacy of the will of the great majority of the people, as distinguished from the judgment of a small minority. . . . The other great difference between the two parties has been this: The liberal party is a party which believes that, as new conditions and problems arise beyond the power of men and women to meet as individuals, it becomes the duty of the Government itself to find new remedies with which to meet them. The liberal party insists that the Government has the definite duty to use all its power and resources to meet new social problems with new social controls — to insure to the average person the right to his own economic and political life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness.

Public Papers and Addresses, 1938 Volume [1941], introduction

We, too, born to freedom, and believing in freedom, are willing to fight to maintain freedom. We, and all others who believe as deeply as we do, would rather die on our feet than live on our knees.2

Fireside Chat [September 11, 1941]

Yesterday, December 7, 1941 — a date which will live in infamy — the United States of America was suddenly and deliberately attacked by naval and air forces of the Empire of Japan.

War Message to Congress [December 8, 1941]

Never before have we had so little time in which to do so much.1

Fireside Chat [February 23, 1942]

We all know that books burn — yet we have the greater knowledge that books cannot be killed by fire. People die, but books never die. No man and no force can abolish memory. . . . In this war, we know, books are weapons.

Message, American Booksellers Association [April 23, 1942]

It is not a tax bill but a tax relief bill providing relief not for the needy but for the greedy.

Tax bill veto message [February 22, 1944]

These Republican leaders have not been content with attacks on me, or my wife, or on my sons. No, not content with that, they now include my little dog, Fala. Well, of course, I don’t resent attacks . . . but Fala does resent them . . . I think I have a right to resent, to object to libelous statements about my dog.2

Perfectionism, no less than isolationism or imperialism or power politics, may obstruct the paths to international peace.

State of the Union Message
[January 6, 1945]

We have learned that we cannot live alone, at peace; that our own well-being is dependent on the well-being of other nations, far away. We have learned that we must live as men, and not as ostriches, nor as dogs in the manger. We have learned to be citizens of the world, members of the human community.

Ib.

Eighth, they believe that all of the nations of the world, for realistic as well as spiritual reasons, must come to the abandonment of the use of force. Since no future peace can be maintained if land, sea or air armaments continue to be employed by nations which threaten, or may threaten, aggression outside of their frontiers, they believe, pending the establishment of a wider and permanent system of general security, that the disarmament of such nations is essential.

Reflections

You do not need to leave your room.

Remain sitting at your table and listen.

Do not even listen, simply wait. Do not even wait, be quite still and solitary.

The world will freely offer itself to you to be unmasked, it has no choice, it will roll in ecstasy at your feet.

Only our concept of time makes it possible for us to speak of the Day of Judgment by that name; in reality it is a summary court in perpetual session.

All human error is impatience, a premature renunciation of method, a delusive pinning down of a delusion.

There are two cardinal sins from which all the others spring: impatience and laziness.

Is war a biological necessity? As regards the earliest cultures the answer is emphatically negative. The blow of the poisonous dart from behind a bush, to murder a woman or a child in their sleep, is not pugnacity. Nor is headhunting, body-snatching, or killing for food instinctive or natural.

Address, Phi Beta Kappa, Harvard University [September 17, 1936]

The hero of the next war, the man who from the air destroys a whole peaceful township in its sleep with poison gas, is not expressing any biological characteristics of his organism, or showing any moral virtues.

When they told me yesterday what had happened, I felt like the moon, the stars and all the planets had fallen on me.

To reporters the day after his accession to the Presidency [April 13, 1945]

The responsibility of the great states is to serve and not to dominate the world.

First Message to Congress [April 16, 1945]

When Kansas and Colorado have a quarrel over the water in the Arkansas River they don't call out the National Guard in each state and go to war over it. They bring a suit in the Supreme Court of the United States and abide by the decision. There isn't a reason in the world why we cannot do that internationally.

Speech, Kansas City [April 1945]

You members of the conference are to be the architects of the better world. In your hands rests our future. By your labors at this conference we shall know if suffering humanity is to achieve a just and lasting peace.

Radio address to delegates at the opening session of the United Nations conference, San Francisco [April 23, 1945]

We must build a new world, a far better world — one in which the eternal dignity of man is respected. Ib.

Message to Congress on atomic energy [October 3, 1945]

Means of destruction hitherto unknown, against which there can be no adequate military defense, and in the employment of which no single nation can in fact have a monopoly.

Declaration on Atomic Energy by President Truman and Prime Ministers Clement Attlee and W. L. Mackenzie King [November 15, 1945]

Effective, reciprocal, and enforceable safeguards acceptable to all nations. Ib.

We must embark on a bold new program for making the benefits of our scientific advances and industrial progress available for the improvement and growth of underdeveloped areas. Memoirs [1955], vol. I, Year of Decisions, preface

Being a President is like riding a tiger. A man has to keep on riding or be swallowed.²

Ib. II, Years of Trial and Hope,
ch. 1

A President either is constantly on the top of events or, if he hesitates, events will soon be on top of him. I never felt that I could let up for a single moment.

Ib.

No one who has not had the responsibility can really understand what it is like to be President, not even his closest aides or members of his immediate family. There is no end to the chain of responsibility that binds him, and he is never allowed to forget that he is President.

Ib.

Once a decision was made, I did not worry about it afterward.

Ib.

Most of the problems a President has to face have their roots in the past.

Ib.

The Marshall Plan will go down in history as one of America's greatest contributions to the peace of the world.

Ib. 8

¹President Truman has used variations of the aphorism . . . for many years, both orally and in his writings. For instance, in his book
Mr. Citizen [1960] in the chapter entitled “Some Thoughts on the Presidency,” he states, “Some men can make decisions and some cannot. Some men fret and delay under criticism. I used to have a saying that applies here, and I note that some people have picked it up.” — Letter to ed-tor from PHILIP D. LACERQUIST, Harry S. Truman Library, Independence, Missouri [February 11, 1966].

To me, party platforms are contracts with the people.

Memoirs, vol. II, Years of Trial and Hope, ch. 13

Polk was a positive man . . . and settled every issue before his term of office expired.

Ib. 14

A man who is influenced by the polls or is afraid to make decisions which may make him unpopular is not a man to represent the welfare of the country.

Ib.

A President cannot always be popular.

Ib.

Every great President in our history had a policy of his own, which eventually won the people's support.

Ib.

Popularity and glamor are only part of the factors involved in winning presidential elections. One of the most important of all is luck. In my own case, luck was always with me, though there was never any intention on my part to make things work my way. If a man starts out to make himself President, he hardly ever arrives.

Ib.

A President needs political understanding to run the government, but he may be elected without it.

Ib.

The convention system has its faults, of course, but I do not know of a better method for choosing a presidential nominee.

Ib.

The Point Four program . . . was created and designed to operate on a continuing basis to point the way to better living for more and more of the world's people — and thus the way to a more lasting peace.

Ib. 16

All my life I have fought against prejudice and intolerance.

Ib. 19

I have little patience with people who take the Bill of Rights for granted.
The Bill of Rights, contained in the first ten amendments to the Constitution, is every American's guarantee of freedom.

Ib.
It [General Douglas MacArthur’s statement on Korea, March 24, 1951] was in open defiance of my orders as President and as Commander in Chief. This was a challenge to the authority of the President under the Constitution. It also flouted the policy of the United Nations. . . . I was deeply shocked.

Memoirs, vol. II, Years of Trial and Hope, ch. 19

If there is one basic element in our Constitution, it is civilian control of the military.
Ib.

There is a right kind and wrong kind of victory, just as there are wars for the right thing and wars that are wrong from every standpoint. . . . The kind of victory MacArthur had in mind — victory by the bombing of Chinese cities, victory by expanding the conflict to all of China — would have been the wrong kind of victory.
Ib.

The buck stops here.

The press is a sort of wild animal in our midst — restless, gigantic, always seeking new ways to use its strength. . . . The sovereign press for the most part acknowledges accountability to no one except its owners and publishers.

The Press Under Pressure [Nieman Reports, April 1948]

Freedom from something is not enough. It should also be freedom for something. Freedom is not safety but opportunity. Freedom ought to be a means to enable the press to serve the proper functions of communication in a free society.

Soldiers are citizens of death’s gray land.

Dreamers

The Chinese love jade. That strange lump of stone with its faintly muddy light, like the crystallized air of the centuries, melting dimly, dully back, deeper and deeper—are not we Orientals the only ones who know its charm? We cannot say ourselves what it is that we find in this stone. It quite lacks the brightness of a ruby or an emerald or the glitter of a diamond. But this much we can say: when we see that shadowy surface, we think how Chinese it is, we seem to find in cloudiness the accumulated sediment of the long Chinese past, we think how appropriate it is that the Chinese should admire that surface and that shadow.

In Praise of Shadows [1934]

We do not dislike everything that shines, but we prefer a pensive shadow to a thin transparence.

We Orientals...find beauty not only in the thing itself but in the pattern of shadows, the light and the darkness, which that thing produces. A phosphorescent jewel gives off its glow and color in the dark and loses its beauty in the light of day . . .

Our ancestors cut off the brightness on the land from above and created a world of shadows, and far in the depths of it they placed woman, making her the whitest of beings.

_In Praise of Shadows_

I would call back at least for literature this world of shadows we are losing. In the mansion called literature I would have the eaves deep and the walls dark, I would push back into the shadows the things that come forward too clearly, I would strip away the useless decoration. I do not ask that this be done everywhere, but perhaps we may be allowed at least one mansion where we can turn off the electric lights and see how it is without them.

The main object of the New Life Movement \(^1\) is to substitute a rational life for the irrational.

Speech, Nanchang

The life of our people will be elevated if we live artistically; we will become wealthy if we live productively; and we will be safe if we lead a military way of life. When we do this, we will have a rational life. ... If we can achieve [a rational life], we will have revolutionized the daily life of our people and laid the foundation for the rehabilitation of our nation.

America was discovered accidentally by a great seaman who was looking for something else; when discovered it was not wanted; and most of the exploration for the next fifty years was done in the hope of getting through or around it.
America was named after a man who discovered no part of the New World.
History is like that, very chancy.

Ib. 2

But sea power has never led to despotism. The nations that have enjoyed sea power even for a brief period —
Athens, Scandinavia, the Netherlands, England, the United States — are those that have preserved freedom for themselves and have given it to others.
Of the despotism to which unrestrained military power leads we have plenty of eamples from Alexander to Mao.

Ib. 3

Make no mistake; the American Revolution was not fought to obtain freedom, but to preserve the liberties that Americans already had as colonials. Independence was no conscious goal, secretly nurtured in cellar or jungle by bearded conspirators, but a reluctant last resort, to preserve "life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness."

The Oxford History of the American People, ch. 12

The freedmen were not really free in 1865, nor are most of their descendants really free in 1965. Slavery was but one aspect of a race and color problem that is still far from solution here, or anywhere. In America particularly, the grapes of wrath have not yet yielded all their bitter vintage.

Ib. 33

These clipper ships of the early 1850's were built of wood in shipyards from Rockland in Maine to Baltimore. These architects, like poets who transmute nature's message into song, obeyed what wind and wave had taught them, to create the noblest of all sailing vessels, and the most beautiful creations of man in America. With no extraneous ornament except a figurehead, a bit of carving and a few lines of gold leaf, their one purpose of speed over the great ocean routes was achieved by perfect balance of spars and sails to the curving lines of the smooth black hull; and this harmony of mass, form and color was practiced to the music of dancing waves and of brave winds whistling in the rigging. These were our Gothic cathedrals, our Parthenon; but monuments carved from snow. For a few brief years they flashed their splendor around the world, then disappeared with the finality of the wild pigeon.¹

Ib. 36

No big modern war has been won without preponderant sea power; and, conversely, very few rebellions of maritime provinces have succeeded without acquiring sea power.²

Four Quartets. East Coker, V

Love is most nearly itself
When here and now cease to matter.
Old men ought to be explorers
Here and there does not matter
We must be still and still moving
Into another intensity

Through the dark cold and the empty desolation,
The wave cry, the wind cry, the vast waters
Of the petrel and the porpoise. In my end is my beginning.

I do not know much about gods; but I think that the river

The sea is the land's edge also, the granite
Into which it reaches, the beaches where it tosses
Its hints of earlier and other creation:
The starfish, the hermit crab, the whale's backbone;
The pools where it offers to our curiosity
The more delicate algae and the sea anemone.
It tosses up our losses, the torn seine,
The shattered lobsterpot, the broken oar
And the gear of foreign dead men. The sea has many voices.

There is no end of it, the voiceless wailing,

No end to the withering of withered flowers.

It [tradition] cannot be inherited,
and if you want it you must obtain it
by great labor.
Tradition and the Individual
Talent [1919]

The progress of an artist is a continual self-sacrifice, a continual extinction of personality. Ib.

Poetry is not a turning loose of emotion, but an escape from emotion; it is not the expression of personality, but an escape from personality. But, of course, only those who have personality

1See Virgil, p. 119a; and Marlowe, p. 219a.

and emotions know what it means to want to escape from these things.

Tradition and the Individual
Talent

The only way of expressing emotion in the form of art is by finding an "objective correlative"; in other words, a set of objects, a situation, a chain of events which shall be the formula of that particular emotion.

Hamlet and His Problems [1919]

Immature poets imitate; mature poets steal.

Philip Massinger [1920]

Every vital development in language is a development of feeling as well.

Ib.

In the seventeenth century a disso-ciation of sensibility set in, from which we have never recovered; and this dissociation, as is natural, was aggraved by the influence of the two most powerful poets of the century, Milton and Dryden.

The Metaphysical Poets [1921]

Poets in our civilization, as it exists at present, must be difficult.... The poet must become more and more comprehensive, more allusive, more indirect, in order to force, to dislocate if necessary, language into its meaning.

Ib.

Humility is the most difficult of all virtues to achieve; nothing dies harder than the desire to think well of oneself.

A Dialogue on Dramatic Poetry
[1928]

1 In a footnote, Eliot writes: "Remy de Gourmont said much the same thing, in speaking of Flaubert."
If I ask myself . . . why I prefer the poetry of Dante to that of Shakespeare, I should have to say, because it seems to me to illustrate a saner attitude towards the mystery of life.

The Sacred Wood, introduction [1928]

The general point of view may be described as classicist in literature, royalist in politics, and Anglo-Catholic in religion.

For Lancelot Andrews [1928], preface

We fight for lost causes because we know that our defeat and dismay may be the preface to our successors' victory, though that victory itself will be temporary; we fight rather to keep something alive than in the expectation that anything will triumph.

Ib. Francis Herbert Bradley

The great weakness of Pragmatism is that it ends by being of no use to anybody.

Genuine poetry can communicate before it is understood.

Dante [1929]

More can be learned about how to write poetry from Dante than from any English poet . . . The language of each great English poet is his own language; the language of Dante is the perfection of a common language.

Ib.

Shakespeare gives the greatest width of human passion; Dante the greatest altitude and greatest depth. Ib.

Sometimes, however, to be a "ruined man" is itself a vocation.

The Use of Poetry and the Use of Criticism [1933]. Wordsworth and Coleridge

As things are, and as fundamentally they must always be, poetry is not a career, but a mug's game. No honest poet can ever feel quite sure of the permanent value of what he has written: he may have wasted his time and messed up his life for nothing.

The Use of Poetry and the Use of Criticism. Conclusion

Tradition by itself is not enough; it must be perpetually criticized and brought up to date under the supervision of what I call orthodoxy.

2 Lo, no man taketh his goods with him—Song of the Harp-Player [c. 2100 B.C.]
The principles of liberalism . . . are older than all existing constitutions and are more deeply rooted than any formulation of them that can be put into words. . . .

The liberal philosophy holds that enduring governments must be accountable to someone beside themselves; that a government responsible only to its own conscience is not for long tolerable. It holds that since any government is liable to fail, there is needed a method of changing the governors without wrecking the state. It holds that unless there is a method, be it through elections or otherwise, by which the governed can make their views effective in some proportion to their weight, the nation is at the mercy of violence in the form of terrorism, assassination, conspiracy, mass compulsion, and civil war.

In Defense of Liberalism [Vanity Fair, November 1934]

The denial that men may be arbitrary in human transactions is the higher law. . . . By this higher law all formal laws and all political behavior are judged in civilized societies. . . . If the sovereign himself may not act willfully, arbitrarily, by personal prerogative, then no one may. His ministers may not. The legislature may not. Majorities may not. Individuals may not. Crowds may not. The national state may not. This law which is the spirit of law is the opposite of an accumulation of old precedents and new facts. By this higher law, that men must not be arbitrary, the old law is continually tested and the new law reviewed.

The Good Society [1937], ch. 15

In foreign relations, as in all other relations, a policy has been formed only when commitments and power have been brought into balance.

U. S. Foreign Policy [1943]

The final test of a leader is that he leaves behind him in other men the conviction and the will to carry on. . . . The genius of a good leader is to leave behind him a situation which common sense, without the grace of genius, can deal with successfully.

Roosevelt Has Gone [April 14, 1945]

The world state is inherent in the United Nations as an oak tree is in an acorn. One World or None [1946]

A regime, an established order, is rarely overthrown by a revolutionary movement; usually a regime collapses of its own weakness and corruption and then a revolutionary movement enters among the ruins and takes over the powers that have become vacant.

For Charles de Gaulle [Today and Tomorrow, June 5, 1958]

I don't care about the word isolationism, and I don't care about the word appeasement. I'm interested in the rights and needs and responsibilities of the United States. We are not the policeman of mankind. We are not able to run the world, and we shouldn't pretend that we can. Let us tend to our own business, which is great enough as it is. It's very great. We have neglected our own affairs. Our education is inadequate, our cities are badly built, our social arrangements are unsatisfactory. We can't wait another generation. Unless we can surmount this crisis, and work and get going onto the path of a settlement in Asia, and a settlement in Europe, all of these plans of the Great Society here at home, all the plans for the rebuilding of backward countries in other continents will all be put on the shelf, because war interrupts everything like that.

A free press is not a privilege but an organic necessity in a great society. . . . A great society is simply a big and complicated urban society.¹

Address, International Press Institute Assembly, London [May 27, 1965]

Without criticism and reliable and intelligent reporting, the government cannot govern.

Address, International Press Institute Assembly, London

Responsible journalism is journalism responsible in the last analysis to the editor's own conviction of what, whether interesting or only important, is in the public interest.

As the free press develops, the paramount point is whether the journalist, like the scientist or scholar, puts truth in the first place or in the second.

KATHERINE MANSFIELD 1889–1923

Whenever I prepare for a journey I prepare as though for death. Should I never return, all is in order. This is what life has taught me.

Journal [1922]

I want, by understanding myself, to understand others. I want to be all that I am capable of becoming. . . . This all sounds very strenuous and serious. But now that I have wrestled with it, it's no longer so. I feel happy — deep down. All is well.

JAWAHARLAL NEHRU 1889–1964

The French Revolution of a hundred and fifty years ago gradually ushered in an age of political equality, but the times have changed, and that by itself is not enough today. The boundaries of democracy have to be widened now so as to include economic equality also. This is the great revolution through which we are all passing.

Glimpses of World History [1939]

The basic fact of today is the tremendous pace of change in human life.

Democracy and socialism are means to an end, not the end itself. Ib.

The forces of a capitalist society, if left unchecked, tend to make the rich richer and the poor poorer. Ib.

I want nothing to do with any religion concerned with keeping the masses satisfied to live in hunger, filth, and ignorance. I want nothing to do with any order, religious or otherwise, which does not teach people that they are capable of becoming happier and more civilized, on this earth, capable of becoming true man, master of his fate and captain of his soul.1

It is you, Russian tongue, we must save, and we swear
We will give you unstained to the sons of our sons;

Forever.

Modern Arms and Free Men [1949], foreword

If democracy loses its touch, then no great war will be needed to overwhelm it. If it keeps and enhances its strength, no great war need come again.

Atomic warfare is bad enough; biological warfare would be worse; but there is something that is worse than either. The French can tell you what it is; or the Czechs, or the Greeks, or the Norwegians, or the Filipinos; it is subject to an alien oppressor.

The perfection preached in the Gospels never yet built up an empire. Every man of action has a strong dose of egotism, pride, hardness, and cunning. But all those things will be forgiven him, indeed, they will be regarded as high qualities, if he can make of them the means to achieve great ends.

Then, at the sight of those bewildered people and of those soldiers in rout . . . I felt myself borne up by a limitless fury. Ah! It's too stupid! The war is beginning as badly as it could. Therefore it must go on. For that, the world is wide. If I live, I will fight, wherever I must, as long as I must, until the enemy is defeated and the national stain washed clean. All I have managed to do since was resolved upon that day.

At present the most unfounded and most harmful distortion is to ridicule Western civilization as materialistic and worship Eastern civilization as spiritual... Modern civilization of the West, built on the foundation of the search for human happiness, not only has definitely increased material enjoyment to no small degree, but can also definitely satisfy the spiritual demands of mankind.

The most outstanding characteristic of Eastern civilization is to know contentment, whereas that of Western civilization is not to know contentment. Contented Easterners are satisfied with their simple life and therefore do not seek to increase their material enjoyment... They are satisfied with their present lot and environment and therefore do not want to conquer nature but merely be at home with nature and at peace with their lot.

ib.

The civilization under which people are restricted and controlled by a material environment from which they cannot escape, and under which they cannot utilize human thought and intellectual power to change environment and improve conditions, is the civilization of a lazy and nonprogressive people. It is a truly materialistic civilization.

O God, give us serenity to accept what cannot be changed, courage to change what should be changed, and wisdom to distinguish the one from the other.
_Prayer_ [1934]

1 This prayer was composed . . . when Niebuhr preached occasionally in the small church near his summer home in Heath, Massachusetts. After the service, Howard Chandler Robbins, a summer neighbor, asked for a copy. He is reported to have been handed the original, with words to the following effect: "Here, take the prayer. I have no further use for it." Other people, it is clear, have felt differently. Robbins published it as part of a pamphlet the following year. Since then it has been adopted as the motto of Alcoholics Anonymous; the U.S.O. distributed millions of copies to servicemen during World War II; the National Council of Churches has reprinted it; and even today it is used commercially on Christmas cards. —_JUNE BINGHAM,,_

_The Children of Light and the Children of Darkness_ [1944]

Life has no meaning except in terms of responsibility.
_Faith and History_ [1949]

Nothing worth doing is completed in our lifetime; therefore, we must be saved by hope. Nothing true or beautiful or good makes complete sense in any immediate context of history; therefore, we must be saved by faith. Nothing we do, however virtuous, can be accomplished alone; therefore, we are saved by love. No virtuous act is quite as virtuous from the standpoint of our friend or foe as from our standpoint. Therefore, we must be saved by the final form of love which is forgiveness.

In a hole in the ground there lived a hobbit. Not a nasty, dirty, wet hole, filled with the ends of worms and an oozy smell, nor yet a dry, bare, sandy hole with nothing in it to sit down on or to eat: it was a hobbit-hole, and that means comfort.

Freedom is an indivisible word.1 If we want to enjoy it, and fight for it, we must be prepared to extend it to everyone, whether they are rich or poor, whether they agree with us or not, no matter what their race or the color of their skin.

One World, ch. 13

The Constitution does not provide for first and second class citizens.

An American Program [1944], ch. 2

I believe in America because in it we are free — free to choose our government, to speak our minds, to observe our different religions. Because we are generous with our freedom, we share our rights with those who disagree with us. Because we hate no people and covet no people's lands. Because we are blessed with a natural and varied abundance. Because we have great dreams and because we have the opportunity to make those dreams come true.

Address [Armistice Day, 1948]

But it [Pearl Harbor], and the subsequent lessons we learned, day by day, until September 1945, should have taught all military men that our military forces are one team — in the game to win regardless of who carries the ball. This is no time for “fancy dans” who won’t hit the line with all they have on every play, unless they can call the signals. Each player on this team — whether he shines in the spotlight of the backfield or eats dirt in the line — must be an All-American.

Nature has . . . some sort of arithmetical-geometrical coordinate system, because nature has all kinds of models.
What we experience of nature is in models, and all of nature’s models are so beautiful. It struck me that nature’s system must be a real beauty, because in chemistry we find that the associations are always in beautiful whole numbers — there are no fractions.

All nature’s structuring, associating,

The reason why the hains stand on end, the eyes water, the throat is con-

As for the aims and ideals of Marxism, there is one feature of them that is now rightly suspect. The taking-over by the state of the means of production and the dictatorship in the interests of the proletariat can by themselves never guarantee the happiness of anybody but the dictators themselves. Marx and Engels, coming out of authoritarian Germany, tended to imagine socialism in authoritarian terms; and Lenin and Trotsky after them, forced as they were to make a beginning among a people who had known nothing but autocracy, also emphasized this side of socialism and founded a dictatorship which perpetuated itself as an autocracy.

I have derived a good deal more benefit of the civilizing as well as of the inspirational kind [of tradition] from the admirable American bathroom than I have from the cathedrals of Europe. . . . I have had a good many more uplifting thoughts, creative and expansive visions — while soaking in comfortable baths or drying myself after bracing showers — in well-equipped American bathrooms than I have ever had in any cathedral.

They were careless people, Tom and Daisy — they smashed up things and creatures and then retreated back into their money or their vast carelessness, or whatever it was that kept them together, and let other people clean up the mess they had made.
_Ib. 9_

So we beat on, boats against the current, borne back ceaselessly into the past.
_Ib. last line_

One writes of scars healed, a loose parallel to the pathology of the skin, but there is no such thing in the life of an individual. There are open wounds, shrunk sometimes to the size of a pinprick, but wounds still. The marks of suffering are more comparable to the loss of a finger, or of the sight of an eye. We may not miss them, either, for one minute in a year, but if we should there is nothing to be done about it.

New England is a finished place. Its destiny is that of Florence or Venice, not Milan, while the American empire careers onward toward its unpredicted end. . . . It is the first American section to be finished, to achieve stability in the conditions of its life. It is the first old civilization, the first permanent civilization in America.

New England: There She Stands.
In Harper’s Magazine [March 1932]

The West begins where the average annual rainfall drops below twenty inches. When you reach the line which marks that drop — for convenience, the one hundredth meridian — you have reached the West.

The Plundered Province. In Harper’s Magazine [August 1934]

Pessimism is only the name that men of weak nerves give to wisdom.

Mark Twain: The Ink of History. Address, University of Missouri [December 1935]

Art is the terms of an armistice signed with fate.

Mark Twain at Work [1942]

The achieved West had given the United States something that no people had ever had before, an internal, domestic empire.

The Year of Decision [1943]

Between the amateur and the professional . . . there is a difference not only in degree but in kind. The skillful man is, within the function of his skill, a different integration, a different nervous and muscular and psychological organization. . . . A tennis player or a watchmaker or an airplane pilot is an automatism but he is also criticism and wisdom.

Across the Wide Missouri [1947]

You can no more keep a martini in the refrigerator than you can keep a kiss there. The proper union of gin and vermouth is a great and sudden glory; it is one of the happiest marriages on earth and one of the shortest-lived.

The Hour [1951]

The water of life was given to us to make us see for a while that we are more nearly men and women, more nearly kind and gentle and generous, pleasanter and stronger, than without its vision there is any evidence we are.

One of the facts which define the United States is that its national and its imperial boundaries are the same. Another is that it is a political unit which occupies a remarkably coherent geographical unit of continental extent.

1 Representing, in context, the South.
The writer's only responsibility is to his art. He will be completely ruthless if he is a good one. He has a dream. It anguishes him so much he must get rid of it. He has no peace until then. Everything goes by the board: honor, pride, decency, security, happiness, all, to get the book written. If a writer has to rob his mother, he will not hesitate; the "Ode on a Grecian Urn" is worth any number of old ladies.

Really the writer doesn't want success. . . . He knows he has a short span of life, that the day will come when he must pass through the wall of oblivion, and he wants to leave a scratch on that wall — Kilroy was here ¹ — that somebody a hundred, or a thousand years later will see.

"Yes," I said. "Isn't it pretty to think so?"  Ib. last lines

I was always embarrassed by the words sacred, glorious, and sacrifice and the expression in vain. We had heard them, sometimes standing in the rain almost out of earshot, so that only the shouted words came through . . . now for a long time, and I had seen nothing sacred, and the things that were glorious had no glory and the sacrifices were like the stockyards at Chicago if nothing was done with the meat except to bury it . . . Abstract words such as glory, honor, courage, or hallow were obscene.

A Farewell to Arms [1929], ch. 27

If people bring so much courage to this world the world has to kill them to break them, so of course it kills them. The world breaks everyone and afterward many are strong at the broken places. But those that will not break it kills. It kills the very good and the very gentle and the very brave impartially. If you are none of these you can be sure that it will kill you too but there will be no special hurry.  Ib. 34

That was what you did. You died. You did not know what it was about. You never had time to learn. They threw you in and told you the rules and the first time they caught you off base they killed you.  Ib. 41

It was like saying goodbye to a statue. After a while I went out and left the hospital and walked back to the hotel in the rain.

Definition of "guts" in The New Yorker [November 30, 1929]

I know only that what is moral is what you feel good after and what is immoral is what you feel bad after.
Death in the Afternoon [1932], ch. 1

I was trying to write then and I found the greatest difficulty, aside from knowing truly what you really felt, rather than what you were supposed to feel, and had been taught to feel, was to put down what really happened in action; what the actual things were which produced the emotion that you experienced . . . the real thing, the sequence of motion and fact which made the emotion and which would be as valid in a year or in ten years or, with luck and if you stated it purely enough, always.

If he wrote it he could get rid of it. He had gotten rid of many things by writing them.
Winner Take Nothing [1933].

Fathers and Sons

All good books are alike in that they are truer than if they had really happened and after you are finished reading one you will feel that all that happened to you and afterwards it all belongs to you: the good and the bad, the ecstasy, the remorse and sorrow, the people and the places and how the weather was. If you can get so that you can give that to people, then you are a writer.

Green Hills of Africa [1935], ch. 1
The rich were dull and they drank too much. . . . He remembered poor Julian and his romantic awe of them and how he had started a story once that began, "The very rich are different from you and me." And how someone had said to Julian, "Yes, they have more money."

The Snows of Kilimanjaro [1936]

Kilimanjaro is a snow-covered mountain 19,710 feet high, and is said to be the highest mountain in Africa. Its western summit is called the Masai "Ngâje Ngâi," the House of God. Close to the western summit there is the dried and frozen carcass of a leopard. No one has explained what the leopard was seeking at that altitude.

Democracy . . . is the only form of government that is founded on the dignity of man, not the dignity of some men, of rich men, of educated men or of white men, but of all men. Its sanction is not the sanction of force, but the sanction of human nature. Equality and justice, the two great distinguishing characteristics of democracy, follow inevitably from the conception of men, all men, as rational and spiritual beings.

When Mrs. Frederick C. Little’s second son was born, everybody noticed that he was not much bigger than a mouse. The truth of the matter was, the baby looked very much like a mouse in every way. He was only two inches high; and he had a mouse’s sharp nose, a mouse’s tail, a mouse’s whiskers, and the pleasant, shy manner of a mouse. Before he was many days old he was not only looking like a mouse but acting like one, too — wearing a gray hat and carrying a small cane.

The Berlin Stories [1945].
Goodbye to Berlin [1939],
A Berlin Diary [Autumn 1930]

Something which is vitally important but which, I think, is often lost sight of in the United States . . . is the fact that international life normally has in it strong competitive elements. It did not take the challenge of Communism to produce this situation. Just as there is no uncomplicated personal relationship between individuals, so, I think, there is no international relationship between sovereign states which is without its elements of antagonism, its competitive aspects. Many of the present relationships of international life are only the eroded remnants of ones which, at one time, were relationships of uncompromising hostility. Every government is in some respects a problem for every other government, and it will always be this way so long as the sovereign state, with its supremely self-centered rationale, remains the basis of international life.

Russia and the West under Lenin and Stalin [1961], ch. 25

If we are to regard ourselves as a grown-up nation—and anything else will henceforth be mortally dangerous—then we must, as the Biblical phrase goes, put away childish things; and among these childish things the first to go, in my opinion, should be self-idealization and the search for absolutes in world affairs: for absolute security, absolute amity, absolute harmony.

The open society, the unrestricted access to knowledge, the unplanned and uninhibited association of men for its furtherance—these are what may make a vast, complex, ever growing, ever changing, ever more specialized and expert technological world, nevertheless a world of human community.

We are handicapped by [foreign] policies based on old myths rather than current realities.

Ib.

The character of the cold war has been profoundly altered . . . by the implicit repudiation by both sides of a policy of total victory . . . . The effect has been to commit us to a policy that can be accurately, though perhaps not prudently, defined as one of "peaceful coexistence."

Ib.

There is much cant in American moralism and not a little inconsistency.

Ib.

We are inclined to confuse freedom and democracy, which we regard as moral principles, with the way in which these are practiced in America—with capitalism, federalism and the two-party system, which are not moral principles, but simply the accepted practices of the American people.

Ib.
The master myth of the cold war is that the Communist bloc is a monolith, composed of governments which are not really governments at all, but organized conspiracies... all equally resolute and implacable in their determination to destroy the free world.

Speech in the Senate

We must dare to think "unthinkable" thoughts. We must learn to explore all the options and possibilities that confront us in a complex and rapidly changing world. We must learn to welcome and not to fear the voices of dissent. We must dare to think about "unthinkable things" because when things become unthinkable, thinking stops and action becomes mindless.

FULBRIGHT — KUNITZ

The longest journey
Is the journey inwards
Of him who has chosen his destiny,
Who has started upon his quest
For the source of his being (Is there a source?).

So! That is the way in which you are tempted to overcome your loneliness — by making the ultimate escape from life. — No! It may be that death is to be your ultimate gift to life: it must not be an act of treachery against it.

In the last analysis, what does the word "sacrifice" mean? Or even the word "gift"? He who has nothing can give nothing. The gift is God's — to God.

Never look down to test the ground before taking your next step: only he who keeps his eye fixed on the far horizon will find his right road.

We carry our nemesis within us: yesterday's self-admiration is the legitimate father of today's feeling of guilt.

What gives life its value you can find — and lose. But never possess. This

On the royal road to Thebes
I had my luck, I met a lovely monster,
And the story's this: I made the monster me.

_The Approach to Thebes_

We learn, as the thread plays out, that we belong
Less to what flatters us than to what scars,
So, freshly turning, as the turn concedes,
For her I killed the propitiatory bird,
Kissing her down. Peace to her bitter bones,
Who taught me the serpent's word, but yet the word.

_The Dark and the Fair_

A fine Italian hand,
With its mimosa touch, has made me feel
Blind-skinned, indelicate, a fool Americano
Touring a culture like a grand museum,
People and statues interchangeable shows,
Perception blunted as one's syntax fails.

_The Thief_

I recognize the gods' capricious hand
And write this poem for money, rage, and love.

I stand on the terrible threshold, and I see
The end and the beginning in each other's arms.

_Open the Gates, st. 3_

An agitation of the air,
A perturbation of the light
Admonished me the unloved year
Would turn on its hinge that night.

_End of Summer, st. 1_

Already the iron door of the north
Clangs open: birds, leaves, snows
Order their populations forth,
And a cruel wind blows.

Now, while the antler of the eaves
Liquefies, drop by drop, I brood

On a Christian thing: unless the leaves Perish, the tree is not renewed.

If all our perishable stuff
Be nourished to its rot, we clean
Our trunk of death, and in our tough
And final growth are evergreen.

_Deciduous Branch, st. 4, 5_

I wept for my youth, sweet passionate young thought,
And cozy women dead that by my side
Once lay: I wept with bitter longing, not Remembering how in my youth I cried.

_The Thing That Eats the Heart, last line_

Cities shall suffer siege and some shall fall,
But man's not taken. What the deep heart means,
Its message of the big, round, childish hand,
Its wonder, its simple lonely cry,
The bloodied envelope addressed to you,
Is history, that wide and mortal pang.

_Night Letter_

When young I scribbled, boasting, on my wall,
No Love, No Property, No Wages.
In youth's good time I somehow bought them all,
And cheap, you'd think, for maybe a hundred pages.
Now in my prime, disburdened of my gear,
My trophies ransomed, broken, lost,
I carve again on the lintel of the year
My sign: Mobility — and damn the cost!

_The Summing-Up_

If I must build a church,
Though I do not really want one,
Let it be in the wilderness
Out of nothing but nail-holes.

The Dyer’s Hand 1 [1962]. Pt. I, Reading

It takes little talent to see clearly what lies under one’s nose, a good deal of it to know in which direction to point that organ. Ib. Writing

The old lady, quoted by E. M. Forster—“How can I know what I think till I see what I say?” Ib.

Speaking for myself, the questions which interest me most when reading a poem are two. The first is technical: “Here is a verbal contraption. How does it work?” The second is, in the broadest sense, moral: “What kind of a guy inhabits this poem? What is his notion of the good life or the good place? His notion of the Evil One? What does he conceal from the reader? What does he conceal even from himself?” Ib. II, Making, Knowing and Judging Whatever its actual content and overt interest, every poem is rooted in imaginative awe. Poetry can do a hundred and one things, delight, sadden, disturb, amuse, instruct—it may express every possible shade of emotion, and describe every conceivable kind of event, but there is only one thing that all poetry must do; it must praise all it can for being and for happening.

The sea lies all around us. The commerce of all lands must cross it. The very winds that move over the lands have been cradled on its broad expanse and seek ever to return to it. The continents themselves dissolve and pass to the sea, in grain after grain of eroded land. . . . In its mysterious past it encompasses all the dim origins of life and receives in the end, after, it may be, many transmutations, the dead husks of that same life. For all at last returns to the sea—the beginning and the end.

American Capitalism: The Concept of Countervailing Power
[1952]

Historians and novelists always have known that tragedy wonderfully reveals the nature of man. But, while they have made rich use of war, revolution, and poverty, they have been singularly neg-lectful of financial panics. And one can relish the varied idiocy of human action during a panic to the full, for, while it is a time of great tragedy, nothing is being lost but money.

The Great Crash, 1929 [1955],
ch. 1

Perhaps it was worth being poor for a long time to be so rich for just a little while.

The end had come, but it was not yet in sight.

The stock market is but a mirror which, perhaps as in this instance, somewhat belatedly, provides an image of the underlying or fundamental economic situation. Cause and effect run from the economy to the stock market never the reverse. In 1929 the economy was headed for trouble. Eventually that trouble was violently reflected in Wall Street.

Men have been swindled by other men on many occasions. The autumn of 1929 was, perhaps, the first occasion when men succeeded on a large scale in swindling themselves.

At any given time there exists an inventory of undiscovered embezzlement in— or more precisely not in—the country’s businesses and banks. This inventory—it should perhaps be called the bozzle—amounts at any moment to many millions of dollars. It also varies in size with the business cycle. In good times people are relaxed, trusting, and money is plentiful. But even though money is plentiful, there are al-
Illusion is a comprehensive ill. The rich man who deludes himself into behaving like a mendicant may conserve his fortune although he will not be very happy. The affluent country which conducts its affairs in accordance with rules of another and poorer age also foregoes opportunities. And in misunderstanding itself it will, in any time of difficulty, implacably prescribe for itself the wrong remedies.

The Affluent Society [1958], ch. 1

The family which takes its mauve and cerise, air-conditioned, power-steered, and power-braked automobile out for a tour passes through cities that are badly paved, made hideous by litter, blighted buildings, billboards, and posts for wires that should long since have been put underground. They pass on into a countryside that has been rendered largely invisible by commercial art. They picnic on exquisitely packaged food from a portable icebox by a polluted stream and go on to spend the night at a park which is a menace to public health and morals. Just before dozing off on an air mattress, beneath a nylon tent, amid the stench of decaying refuse, they may reflect vaguely on the curious unevenness of their blessings. Is this, indeed, the American genius?

The Affluent Society, ch. 18

In a community where public services have failed to keep abreast of private consumption things are very different. Here, in an atmosphere of private opulence and public squalor, the private goods have full sway.

Ib.

Nothing so weakens government as persistent inflation.

Ib.

People are the common denominator of progress. So . . . no improvement is possible with unimproved people, and advance is certain when people are liberated and educated. It would be wrong to dismiss the importance of roads, railroads, power plants, mills, and the other familiar furniture of economic development. . . . But we are coming to realize . . . that there is a certain sterility in economic monuments that stand alone in a sea of illiteracy. Conquest of illiteracy comes first.

I knew a woman, lovely in her bones.
When small birds sighed, she would sigh back at them;
Ah, when she moved, she moved more ways than one:
The shapes a bright container can contain!

Now, in this waning of light,
I rock with the motion of morning;
In the cradle of all that is,
I'm lulled into half-sleep
By the lapping of water,
Cries of the sandpiper.
Water's my win, and my way,
And the spirit runs, intermittently,
In and out of the small waves,
Runs with the intrepid shorebirds —
How graceful the small before danger!

In the first of the moon,
All's a scattering,
A shining.

KENNEDY

The white sound rising now to fury
As Earth’s close down, give us the endless sky.\(^1\)

For the 1956 Opposition of Mars \[1961\]

JOHN FITZGERALD KENNEDY
1917–1963

It was involuntary. They sank my boat.

Remark when asked how he became a hero. Quoted in Arthur M. Schlesinger, Jr., A Thousand Days \[1965\], ch. 4

For without belittling the courage with which men have died, we should not forget those acts of courage with which men . . . have lived. The courage of life is often a less dramatic spectacle than the courage of a final moment; but it is no less a magnificent mixture of triumph and tragedy. A man does what he must—in spite of personal consequences, in spite of obstacles and dangers and pressures—and that is the basis of all human morality.

Profiles in Courage \[1956\], ch. 11

It is time for a new generation of leadership, to cope with new problems and new opportunities. For there is a new world to be won.

Television address \[July 4, 1960\]

The New Frontier of which I speak is not a set of promises—it is a set of challenges. It sums up not what I intend to offer the American people, but what I intend to ask of them.

Speech accepting Democratic presidential nomination \[July 15, 1960\]

Today, the eyes of all people are truly upon us, and our governments, in every branch, at every level, national, state, and local, must be as a city upon a hill,\(^1\) constructed and inhabited by men aware of their grave trust and their great responsibilities.

Speech, Massachusetts State Legislature \[January 9, 1961\]

For of those to whom much is given, much is required. And when at some future date the high court of history sits in judgment on each of us, recording whether in our brief span of service we fulfilled our responsibilities to the state, our success or failure, in whatever office we hold, will be measured by the answers to four questions: First, were we truly men of courage . . . Second, were we truly men of judgment . . . Third, were we truly men of integrity . . . Finally, were we truly men of dedication?

Ib.

We observe today not a victory of party but a celebration of freedom, symbolizing an end as well as a beginning, signifying renewal as well as change.

Inaugural address \[January 20, 1961\]

Let the word go forth from this time and place, to friend and foe alike, that the torch has been passed to a new generation of Americans, born in this century, tempered by war, disciplined by a hard and bitter peace, proud of our ancient heritage, and unwilling to witness or permit the slow undoing of those human rights to which this nation has always been committed, and to which we are committed today at home and around the world.

Let every nation know, whether it wishes us well or ill, that we shall pay any price, bear any burden, meet any hardship, support any friend, oppose any foe to assure the survival and the success of liberty.

If a free society cannot help the many who are poor, it cannot save the few who are rich.

Ib.

\(^1\) These lines were used in the Pacific Science Center at the Seattle World’s Fair in 1962 to epitomize the interdependence of science and the humanities.

\(^2\) See John Winthrop, p. 318a, whom Kennedy quoted in the preceding passage, and note.

Let us never negotiate out of fear, but let us never fear to negotiate.

Inaugural address

All this will not be finished in the first one hundred days. Nor will it be finished in the first one thousand days, nor in the life of this Administration, nor even perhaps in our lifetime on this planet. But let us begin.

Ib.

Now the trumpet summons us again—not as a call to bear arms, though arms we need; not as a call to battle, though embattled we are; but a call to hear the burden of a long twilight struggle,1 year in and year out, "rejoicing in hope, patient in tribulation," a struggle against the common enemies of mankind: tyranny, poverty, disease and war itself.

Ib.

The energy, the faith, the devotion which we bring to this endeavor will light our country and all who serve it, and the glow from that fire can truly light the world.

Ib.

And so, my fellow Americans, ask not what your country can do for you; ask what you can do for your country.2

Ib.

See Stevenson, p. 1049.

For, stripped of the temporary associations which gave rise to it, it is now the moment when by common consent we pause to become conscious of our national life and to rejoice in it, to recall what our country has done for each of us, and to ask ourselves what we can do for our country in return. — Oliver Wendell Holmes, Jr. Address Before John Sedwick Post No. 4, Grand Army of the Republic [May 30, 1884]

As has often been said, the youth who loves his Alma Mater will always ask, not "What can she do for me?" but "What can I do for her?" — Le Baron Russell Briggs, Routine and Ideals [1904], College Life

In the great fulfillment we must have a citizenship less concerned about what the government can do for it and more anxious about what it can do for the nation. — Warren G. Harding, Republican National Convention, Chicago [June 7, 1916]

This thought had lain in Kennedy's mind for a long time. As far back as 1945 he had noted down in a looseleaf notebook a quotation from Rousseau: "As soon as any man says of the affairs of the state, What does it matter to me? the state may be given up as lost." — Arthur M. Schlesinger, Jr. A Thousand Days [1965], prologue, footnote

It is our task in our time and in our generation to hand down undiminished to those who come after us, as was handed down to us by those who went before, the natural wealth and beauty which is ours.

Address, dedication ceremonies of the National Wildlife Federation Building [March 3, 1961]

For in the development of this organization [the United Nations] rests the only true alternative to war, and war appeals no longer as a rational alternative. Unconditional war can no longer lead to unconditional victory. It can no longer serve to settle disputes. It can no longer be of concern to great powers alone. For a nuclear disaster, spread by winds and waters and fear, could well engulf the great and the small, the rich and the poor, the committed and the uncommitted alike. Mankind must put an end to war or war will put an end to mankind. So let us resolve that Dag Hammarskjöld did not live, or die, in vain. Let us call a truce to terror.

Address, United Nations [September 25, 1961]

However close we sometimes seem to that dark and final abyss, let no man of peace and freedom despair. For he does not stand alone. If we all can persevere, if we can in every land and office look beyond our own shores and ambitions, then surely the age will dawn in which the strong are just and the weak secure and the peace preserved.

Ib.

Those who make peaceful revolution impossible will make violent revolution inevitable.

Address to Latin American diplomats, the White House [March 12, 1962]

No one can doubt that the wave of the future is not the conquest of the world by a single dogmatic creed but...
the liberation of the diverse energies of free nations and free men.

Address, University of California, Berkeley [March 23, 1962]

I think this is the most extraordinary collection of talent, of human knowledge, that has ever been gathered together at the White House, with the possible exception of when Thomas Jefferson dined alone.

Address, White House dinner and reception honoring Nobel Prize winners [April 1962]

Let us not be blind to our differences — but let us also direct attention to our common interests and the means by which those differences can be resolved. And if we cannot end now our differences, at least we can help make the world safe for diversity.

Address, American University, Washington, D.C. [June 10, 1963]

Every American ought to have the right to be treated as he would wish to be treated, as one would wish his children to be treated. This is not the case.

Television address on civil rights, after the registration of two Negroes at the University of Alabama [June 12, 1963]

We are confronted primarily with a moral issue. It is as old as the Scriptures and is as clear as the American Constitution.

No one has been barred on account of his race from fighting or dying for America — there are no “white” or “colored” signs on the foxholes or graveyards of battle.

Message to Congress on proposed civil rights bill [June 19, 1963]

All free men, wherever they may live, are citizens of Berlin. And therefore, as a free man, I take pride in the words “Ich bin ein Berliner.”

Address at City Hall, West Berlin [June 26, 1963]

Yesterday, a shaft of light cut into the darkness. . . . For the first time, an agreement has been reached on bringing the forces of nuclear destruction under international control. . . . It offers to all the world a welcome sign of hope. . . . But the achievement of this goal is not a victory for one side; it is a victory for mankind.

Television address, Washington [July 26, 1963]

When power leads man toward arrogance, poetry reminds him of his limitations. When power narrows the areas of man’s concern, poetry reminds him of the richness and diversity of his existence. When power corrupts, poetry cleanses, for art establishes the basic human truths which must serve as the touchstone of our judgment.

Address, Amherst College [October 26, 1963]

I look forward to a great future for America, a future in which our country will match its military strength with our moral restraint, its wealth with our wisdom, its power with our purpose. I look forward to an America which will not be afraid of grace and beauty, which will protect the beauty of our natural environment . . . an America which will reward achievement in the arts as we reward achievement in business or statecraft. . . . I look forward to an America which commands respect throughout the world not only for its strength but for its civilization as well. And I look forward to a world which will be safe not only for democracy and diversity but also for personal distinction.

Washington is a city of southern efficiency and northern charm.

Mr. Edwards and the Spider

On Windsor Marsh, I saw the spider die
When thrown into the bowels of fierce fire:
There’s no long struggle, no desire
To get up on its feet and fly —
It stretches out its feet
And dies. This is the sinner’s last retreat;
Yes, and no strength exerted on the heat
Then sinews the abolished will, when sick
And full of burning, it will whistle on a brick.

STEWART LEE UDALL 1920-

The most common trait of all primitive peoples is a reverence for the life-giving earth, and the native American shared this elemental ethic: the land was alive to his loving touch, and he, its son, was brother to all creatures. His feelings were made visible in medicine bundles and dance rhythms for rain, and all of his religious rites and land attitudes favored the inseparable world of nature and God, the master of Life. During the long Indian tenure the land remained undefiled save for scars no deeper than the scratches of cornfield clearings or the farming canals of the Hohokams on the Arizona desert.

The Quiet Crisis 1 [1963], ch. 1

A land ethic for tomorrow should be as honest as Thoreau's Walden, and as comprehensive as the sensitive science of ecology. It should stress the oneness of our resources and the live-and-help-live logic of the great chain of life. If, in our haste to "progress," the economics of ecology are disregarded by citizens and policy makers alike, the result will be an ugly America. Ib. 14

1 See John F. Kennedy, p. 1073a-b, and 1074b.

2 Almost fifteen years ago, when I was working for Paul Hoffman in the Marshall Plan, I had to substitute for him in making a speech at Colgate University. Remembering Edmund Burke's famous commentary on the turbulence of his time, I called this speech "Reflections on the Revolution of Rising Expectations." The phrase has since been attributed to nearly every literate American of our time, but I think this was the first time that phrase saw the light of day.—HARLAN CLEVELAND, The Evolution of Rising Responsibility, address before the U.N. [December 23, 1962]

3 The race between education and erosion, between wisdom and waste has not run its course. . . . The nation's battle to preserve the common estate is far from won . . . . The crisis may be quiet, but it is urgent.—JOHN F. KENNEDY, introduction to The Quiet Crisis

Love Calls Us to the Things of This World [1956]

The soul shrinks
From all that it is about to remember,
From the punctual rape of every blessed day.
And cries,
"Oh, let there be nothing on earth but laundry,
Nothing but rosy hands in the rising steam
And clear dances done in the sight of heaven.

Neither pale nor bright,
The turkey-cock parades
Through radiant squalors, darkly auspicious as
The ace of spades,

Himself his own cortège
And puffed with the pomp of death,
Rehearsing over and over with strangled rôle
His latest breath.

A Black November Turkey [1956], st. 3, 4

Mind in its purest play is like some bat
That beats about in caverns all alone,
Contriving by a kind of senseless wit
Not to conclude against a wall of stone.

It has no need to falter or explore;
Darkly it knows what obstacles are there,
And so may weave and flitter, dip and soar
In perfect courses through the blackest air.

And has this simile a like perfection?
The mind is like a bat. Precisely. Save That in the very happiest intellection
A graceful error may correct the cave.

Mind [1956]

Dear God, let it be with these donkeys that I come,
And let it be that angels lead us in peace

To leafy streams where cherries tremble in air,
Sleck as the laughing flesh of girls; and there
In that haven of souls let it be that, leaning above
Your divin waters, I shall resemble these donkeys, Whose humble and sweet poverty will appear
Clear in the clearness of your eternal love.

Francis Jammes: A Prayer to Go to Paradise with the Donkeys [1956]

The werewolf's painful change. Turning his head away
On the sweaty bolster, he tries to remember
The mood of manhood,

But lies at last, as always,
Letting it happen, the fierce fur soft to his face,
Hearing with sharper ears.

Beasts [1956], st. 3, 4

What is our praise or pride
But to imagine excellence, and try to make it?
What does it say over the door of Heaven
But homo fecit?

For the New Railway Station in Rome [1956], last stanza

When you come, as you soon must, to the streets of our city,
Mad-eyed from stating the obvious,
Not proclaiming our fall but begging us
In God's name to have self-pity,

Spare us all word of the weapons, their force and range,
The long numbers that rocket the mind;
Our slow, unreckoning hearts will be left behind,
Unable to fear what is too strange.

Nor shall you scare us with talk of the death of the race.

How should we dream of this place without us? —
The sun mere fire, the leaves untroubled about us,
A stone look on the stone's face?

_Advice to a Prophet_ [1961], st. 3

Ask us, prophet, how we shall call
Our natures forth when that live tongue is all
Dispelled, that glass obscured or broken

In which we have said the rose of our love and the clean
Horse of our courage, in which beheld
The singing locust of the soul unshelled,
And all we mean or wish to mean.

_Ib. _st. 7, 8

Duke, keep your coin. All men are born distraught,
And will not for the world be satisfied.
Whether we live in fact, or but in thought,
We die of thirst, here at the fountain-side.

_Ballade for the Duke of Orleans_ [1961], who offered a prize at Blois [c. 1457] for the best ballade employing the line “Je meurs de soif auprès de la fontaine.”

All bitter things conduce to sweet,
As this example shows;
Without the little spirochete
We'd have no chocolate to eat,
Nor would tobacco's fragrance greet
The European nose.

_Pangloss's Song: A Comic Opera Lyric_ [1961]

What can I do but move
From folly to defeat,
And call that sorrow sweet
That teaches us to see
The final face of love
In what we cannot be?

_Someone Talking to Himself_ [1961], last stanza

There, In the other wood, The uncornered animal's, running off Upon instinct. Sails spread, fox wings Lift him alive over gullies, Hair tips all over him lightly Touched with the moon's red silver, Back-hearing around The stream of his body the tongue of hounds Feather him. In his own animal sun Made of human moonlight,
He flies like a bolt running home.

[The Negro past] of rope, fire, torture, castration, infanticide, rape; death and humiliation; fear as deep as the marrow of the bone; doubt that he was worthy of life, since everyone around him denied it; sorrow for his women, for his kinfolk, for his children, who needed his protection, and whom he could not protect; rage, hatred and murder, hatred for white men so deep that it often turned against him and his own, and made all love, all trust, all joy impossible. 1928–

The millions who are poor in the United States tend to become increasingly invisible. . . . It takes an effort of the intellect and will even to see them.

The Other America: Poverty in the United States [1962], ch. 1

The other America, the America of poverty, is hidden today in a way that it never was before. Its millions are socially invisible to the rest of us. . . . The very development of American society is creating a new kind of blindness about poverty. The poor are increasingly slipping out of the very experience and consciousness of the nation. Ib.

That the poor are invisible is one of the most important things about them. They are not simply neglected . . . they are not seen. Ib.

For the urban poor the police are those who arrest you. In almost any slum there is a vast conspiracy against the forces of law and order. Ib.

Unearned suffering is redemptive. Ib.

Nonviolence is the answer to the crucial political and moral questions of our time; the need for man to overcome oppression and violence without resorting to oppression and violence.

Man must evolve for all human conflict a method which rejects revenge, aggression and retaliation. The foundation of such a method is love.1

Speech accepting Nobel Peace Prize [December 11, 1964]

The tortuous road which has led from Montgomery to Oslo is a road over which millions of Negroes are traveling to find a new sense of dignity. It will, I am convinced, be widened into a superhighway of justice. Ib.

I accept this award with an abiding faith in America and an audacious faith in the future of mankind. I refuse to accept the idea that the “isness” of man’s present nature makes him morally incapable of reaching up for the “oughtness” that forever confronts him.

I refuse to accept the cynical notion that nation after nation must spiral down a militaristic stairway into the hell of nuclear destruction. I believe that unarmed truth and unconditional love will have the final word in reality. Ib.

1 See Gandhi, p. 897a.
Nonviolent action, the Negro saw, was the way to supplement, not replace, the process of change. It was the way to divest himself of passivity without arming himself in vindictive force.

Why We Can't Wait [1964]

The Negro was willing to risk martyrdom in order to move and stir the social conscience of his community and the nation... he would force his oppressor to commit his brutality openly, with the rest of the world looking on... Nonviolent resistance paralyzed and confused the power structures against which it was directed.

Tom o’ Bedlam [17th century], st. 1

These things seem wondrous, yet more wondrous
Whose heart with fear doth freeze, with love doth fry.

From Madrigals to Four Voices . . . the First Book [1594]

Thuké, the period of cosmography,
Doth vaunt of Hecla, whose sulphurous fire
Doth melt the frozen clime and thaw the sky;
Trinacrian Aetna’s flames ascend not higher.

O metaphysical tobacco,
Fetched as far as from Morocco,
Thy searching fume
Exhales the rheum,
O metaphysical tobacco.

From Michael East, The Second Set of Madrigals [1606]

From the hag and hungry goblin
That into rags would rend ye,
And the spirit that stands by the naked man
In the book of Moons defend ye!

Tom o’ Bedlam [17th century], st. 1

*See Byron, p. 584, and note.
With an host of furious fancies
Whereof I am commander,
With a burning spear, and a horse of air,
To the wilderness I wander.
By a knight of ghosts and shadows
I summoned am to tourny
Ten leagues beyond the wide world's end.
Methinks it is no journey.
   Tom o’ Bedlam, st. 8

There is a lady sweet and kind,
Was never face so pleased my mind;
I did but see her passing by,
And yet I love her till I die.
   From Thomas Ford, Music of Sundry Kinds [1607], st. 1

Cupid is winged and doth range,
Her country so my love doth change;
But change she earth, or change she sky,
Yet will I love her till I die.  Ib. st. 6

Four arms, two necks, one wreathing;
Two pairs of lips, one breathing;
Two hearts that multiply
Sighs interchangeably.
   From Thomas Weelkes, Airs or Fantastic Spirits [1608]

Love not me for comely grace,
For my pleasing eye or face,
Nor for any outward part,
No, nor for a constant heart.
   From John Wilbye, Second Set of Madrigals [1608]

The silver swan, who living had no note,
When death approached unlocked her silent throat;
Leaning her breast against the reedy shore,
Thus sung her first and last, and sung no more:
Farewell, all joys; O death, come close mine eyes;
More geese than swans now live, more fools than wise.
   From Orlando Gibbons, The First Set of Madrigals and Motets [1612], I

Laïs now old, that erst attempting lass,
To goddess Venus consecrates her glass;
For she herself hath now no use of one,

No dimpled cheeks hath she to gaze upon.
She cannot see her springtime damask grace,
Nor dare she look upon her winter face!
   From Orlando Gibbons, The First Set of Madrigals and Motets, XIII

Stay, O sweet, and do not rise!
The light that shines comes from thine eyes;
The day breaks not: it is my heart,
Because that you and I must part.
Stay, or else my joys will die,
And perish in their infancy.
   John Dowland, A Pilgrim’s Solace [1612]

If there is a paradise on the face of the earth,
It is this, oh! it is this, oh! it is this!
   Mogul Inscription in the Red Fort at Delhi [1640]

And when with envy Time, transported,
Shall think to rob us of our joys,
You’ll in your girls again be courted,
And I’ll go wooing in my boys.
   Winifreda, st. 8

But in vain she did conjure him
To depart her presence so;
Having a thousand tongues to allure him,
And but one to bid him go.
   Dulcina, 4 st. 2

Over the mountains and over the waves,
Under the fountains and under the graves;
Under floods that are deepest, which Neptune obey,
Over rocks that are steepest, Love will find out the way.
   Love Will Find Out the Way, st. 1

Begone, dull Care! I prithee begone from me!

2 Imitated from the Greek of Plato, The Greek Anthology.
See Prior, p. 988a.
2 Attributed also to John Donne, and included in a variant in the seventh edition of his poems [1669].
3 The translation is from Persian in Murray’s Guide to India.
4 This song is mentioned by Izaak Walton in The Compleat Angler [1653]. It has been ascribed to Raleigh, on very doubtful authority.
ANONYMOUS

Begone, dull Care! Thou and I shall never agree.
From JOHN PIAYFORD, Musical Companion [1687]

Though little, I'll work as hard as a Turk,
If you'll give me employ,
To plow and sow, and reap and mow,
And be a farmer's boy.
The Farmer's Boy [before 1689], st. 2

Carriages without horses shall go,
And accidents fill the world with woe.
Prophecy attributed to Mother Shipton [17th century]

Around the world thoughts shall fly
In the twinkling of an eye. Ib.

Under water men shall walk,
Shall ride, shall sleep, and talk;
In the air men shall be seen
In white, in black, and in green. Ib.

Iron in the water shall float
As easy as a wooden boat. Ib.

The Beggar's Daughter of Bethnal Green, st. 33

When captains courageous, whom death could not daunt,

1 Most of the prophecies attributed to Mother Shipton—a witch and prophetess, according to tradition, who lived in Yorkshire in Tudor times—are fabrications of the seventeenth century and later.

2 This very house was built by the blind beggar of Bednall Green, so much talked of and sung in ballads.—SAMUEL PEPSY, Diary [June 26, 1663]
Did march to the siege of the city of Gaunt,
They mustered their soldiers by two and by three,
And the foremost in battle was Mary Ambree. Mary Ambree, st. 1

Then let Jane Shore with sorrow sing,
That was beloved of a king.

Jane Shore, st. 1

"I'll rest," said he, "but thou shalt walk";
So doth this wandering Jew
From place to place, but cannot rest
For seeing countries new.

The Wandering Jew, st. 9

For thirty pence our Savior was sold
Among the false Jews, as I have been told;
And twenty-nine is the worth of thee,
For I think thou art penny worser than he.

King John and the Abbot of Canterbury, st. 21

Glasgerion swore a full great oath,
By oak, and ash and thorn.

Glasgerion, st. 19

In Scarlet town, where I was born,
There was a fair maid dwellin',
Made every youth cry Well-a-way!
Her name was Barbara Allen.

All in the merry month of May,
When green buds they were swellin',
Young Jemmy Grove on his deathbed lay,
For love of Barbara Allen.

Barbara Allen's Cruelty, st. 1, 2

So slowly, slowly rose she up,
And slowly she came nigh him,
And when she drew the curtain by—
"Young man, I think you're dyin'."

"A bed for you and me!"
"Fye na, fye na," said may Margaret,
"Till anes we married be!"

Clerk Saunders, st. 2

There were two sisters sat in a bower;
Binnorie, O Binnorie!
There came a knight to be their wooer,
By the bonnie milldams o' Binnorie.

Binnorie, st. 1

There were three ravens sat on a tree,
They were as black as they might be.

The one of them said to his mate,
"Where shall we our breakfast take?"

The Three Ravens, st. 1, 2

Down there came a fallow doe
As great with young as she might go.

The Twa Corbies, st. 5

Ye Highlands and ye Lawlands,
O where hae ye been?
They hae slain the Earl of Murray,
And hae laid him on the green.

The Bonny Earl of Murray, st. 1

O waly, waly, up the bank,
And waly, waly, doun the brae,
And waly, waly, yon burnside,
Where I and my Love wont to gae!

Waly, Waly, st. 1

O waly, waly, gin love be bonnie,
A little time while it is new!
But when 'tis auld it waxeth cauld,
And fades awa' like morning dew.

Ib. st. 2
But had I wist, before I kist,
That love had been sae ill to win,
I had lock’d my heart in a case o’ gowd,
And pinn’d it wi’ a siller pin.

"What gat ye to your dinner, Lord Randal, my son?

Our life is but a span,

1 The first record of this prayer is found in the Enchiridion Leonis [A.D. 1160]. The early editions of the Primer give the first line of the prayer as: “Now I lay me down to take my sleep.” The familiar version of the line appeared in the edition of 1784. In the edition of 1814 the second line reads, “I pray thee, Lord, my soul to keep.”

The Girl I Left Behind Me.

Title of song [1759]

The united voice of all His Majesty's free and loyal subjects in America — liberty and property, and no stamps.

Motto of various American colonial newspapers [1765–1766]

Yankee Doodle came to town
Upon a little pony,
He stuck a feather in his hat
And called it macaroni.

Yankee Doodle, keep it up,
Yankee Doodle dandy,
Mind the music and the step,
And with the girls be handy.

Yankee Doodle,¹ st. 1, chorus

It's all in the day's work.

Current since the 18th century

Man may work from sun to sun, But woman's work is never done.

Old saying

Count that day lost whose low descending sun Views from thy hand no worthy action done.²

Old saying

In good king Charles's golden days, When loyalty no harm meant; A furious High-Churchman I was, And so I gain'd preferment. Unto my flock I daily preach'd, Kings are by God appointed, ¹ This version was sufficiently popular in America in 1767 to be used in the ballad opera The Disappointment; or, The Force of Credulity by Andrew Barton.

Father and I went up to camp, Along with Captain Goodwin; And there we saw the men and boys, As thick as hasty pudding. Yankee doodle do.

Version used by Royall Tyler, in The Contrast [1790]

The origin of Yankee Doodle remains as mysterious as ever, unless it be deemed a positive result to have eliminated definitely every theory thus far advanced. — Oscar George Theodore Sonneck, Report on the Star-Spangled Banner, Hail Columbia, America, Yankee Doodle [1909]

² An earlier version (signed by James Bobart, December 8, 1697) begins “Think” rather than “Count.”

And damned are those who dare resist, Or touch the Lord's Anointed. And this is law, I will maintain, Unto my dying day, sir, That whatsoever king shall reign, I will be the Vicar of Bray, sir!

The Vicar of Bray [1734], st. 1 and chorus

Don't tread on me.

Motto of the first official American flag; first raised by Lieutenant John Paul Jones in Commodore Esek Hopkins's flagship Alfred [December 3, 1775]

Rebellion to tyrants is obedience to God.¹

Motto on Thomas Jefferson's seal [c. 1776]

Lost is our old simplicity of times, The world abounds with laws, and teems with crimes.

On the Proceedings Against America,² st. 1

Our cargoes of meat, drink, and clothes beat the Dutch.

Siege of Boston [1775]

There is nothing new except what is forgotten.

Attributed to Mademoiselle Bertin, milliner to Marie Antoinette [c. 1785]

O Paddy dear, an' did ye hear the news that's goin' round? The shamrock is by law forbid to grow on Irish ground! No more St. Patrick's Day we'll keep, his color can't be seen, For there's a cruel law agin the wearin' o' the Green!

The Wearing o' the Green; or, The Sham-von-Vogt

¹ The motto of one, I believe, of the repulicides of Charles I. — Letter from Jefferson to Edward Everett [February 24, 1823]

Jefferson's reference probably is to John Bradshaw [1602–1659].

² In the Pennsylvania Gazette [February 8, 1775], "from a late London Magazine."
For they're hangin' men an' women there for wearin' o' the Green.

JUNIUS

One precedent creates another. They soon accumulate and constitute law. What yesterday was fact, today is doctrine.

The Letters of Junius [1769–1771]. Dedication to the English Nation

The liberty of the press is the palladium of all the civil, political, and religious rights of an Englishman. Ib.

These are the gloomy companions of a disturbed imagination; the melancholy madness of poetry, without the inspiration.

Ib. 7, to Sir William Draper [March 3, 1769]

There are some hereditary strokes of character by which a family may be as clearly distinguished as by the blackest features of the human face.

Ib. 12, to the Duke of Grafton [May 30, 1769]

I believe there is yet a spirit of resistance in this country, which will not submit to be oppressed; but I am sure there is a fund of good sense in this country, which cannot be deceived.

Ib. 16, to the Printer of the Public Advertiser (H. S. Woodfall) [July 19, 1769]

We owe it to our ancestors to preserve entire those rights, which they have delivered to our care: we owe it to our posterity, not to suffer their dearest inheritance to be destroyed.

Ib. 20, to the Printer of the Public Advertiser [August 8, 1769]

When the constitution is openly invaded, when the first original right of the people, from which all laws derive their authority, is directly attacked, inferior grievances naturally lose their force, and are suffered to pass by without punishment or observation.

The Letters of Junius. 30, to the Printer of the Public Advertiser [October 17, 1769]

There is a moment of difficulty and danger at which flattery and falsehood can no longer deceive, and simplicity itself can no longer be misled.

Ib. 35,1 to the Printer of the Public Advertiser [December 19, 1769]

They [the Americans] equally detest the pageantry of a king, and the supercilious hypocrisy of a bishop.2 Ib.

There is a holy mistaken zeal in politics as well as in religion. By persuading others, we convince ourselves. Ib.

The least considerable man among us has an interest equal to the proudest nobleman, in the laws and constitution of his country, and is equally called upon to make a generous contribution in support of them — whether it be the heart to conceive, the understanding to direct, or the hand to execute.3

Ib. 37, to the Printer of the Public Advertiser [March 19, 1770]

We lament the mistakes of a good man, and do not begin to detest him until he affects to renounce his principles.

Ib. 41, to Lord Mansfield [November 14, 1770]

The injustice done to an individual is sometimes of service to the public.

2 See Rufus Choate, p. 591a.

3 See Gibbon, p. 466a.
Facts are apt to alarm us more than the most dangerous principles.

_The Letters of Junius, 42, to Lord Mansfield_

An honest man, like the true religion, appeals to the understanding, or modestly confides in the internal evidence of his conscience. The impostor employs force instead of argument, imposes silence where he cannot convince, and propagates his character by the sword.

_Ib._

If individuals have no virtues, their vices may be of use to us.

_Ib. 59, to the Printer of the Public Advertiser [October 5, 1771]_

The temple of fame is the shortest passage to riches and preferment.

Is like a garden full of weeds.

_A Man of Words and Not of Deeds_

It's like a lion at the door;
And when the door begins to crack,
It's like a stick across your back;
And when your back begins to smart,
It's like a penknife in your heart;
And when your heart begins to bleed,
You're dead, and dead, and dead, indeed.

1 The rhymes of Mother Goose originated with _Mother Goose Tales as Contes de ma mère l'Oye_ [1697] by Charles Perrault [1628-1703]. The Tales were first translated in 1729, the rhymes as _Mother Goose's Melody_ in 1781 by Robert Samber, and published in London by John Newbery [1715-1787], who originated the publication of children's books. There are many other collections and versions of the rhymes, like _Gammer Gurton's Garland_ [1784], which also included older rhymes of English origin.

Three blind mice, see how they run!
They all ran after the farmer's wife,
She cut off their tails with a carving-knife,
Did you ever see such a sight in your life,
As three blind mice?

_Three Blind Mice_

A frog he would a-wooing go.

Monday's child is fair of face,
Tuesday's child is full of grace,
Wednesday's child is full of woe,
Thursday's child has far to go,
Friday's child is loving and giving,
Saturday's child has to work for its living,
But a child that's born on the Sabbath day
Is fair and wise and good and gay.

There were three jolly huntsmen,
As I have heard them say,
And they would go a-hunting
Upon St. David's Day.

There Were Three Jolly Huntsmen

All day they hunted,
And nothing did they find,
But a ship a-sailing,
A-sailing with the wind.

There was a little man, and he had a little gun,
And his bullets were made of lead, lead, lead;
He went to the brook, and saw a little duck,
And shot it through the head, head, head.

I had a little pony,
His name was Dapple Gray:
I lent him to a lady
To ride a mile away.
She whipped him, she slashed him,
She rode him through the mire;
I would not lend my pony now
For all the lady's hire.

Hark! Hark! The dogs do bark,
The beggars are coming to town;
Some in rags, some in tags,
And some in velvet gowns.

Hark! Hark!
Ten little Indians standing in a line—
One went home, and then there were nine.

When good King Arthur ruled this land,
He was a goodly king,
He bought three pecks of barley meal,
To make a bag pudding.

One misty, moisty morning,
When cloudy was the weather,
I chanced to meet an old man
Clothed all in leather;
He began to compliment,
And I began to grin
“How do you do?” and “How do you do?”
And “How do you do?” again!

Bobby Shaftoe’s gone to sea,
Silver buckles on his knee;
He’ll come back and marry me,
Pretty Bobby Shaftoe.

Fe fi fo fum!
I smell the blood of an Englishman;
Be he alive or be he dead,
I’ll grind his bones to make my bread.

Sing, sing! What shall I sing?
The cat’s run away with the pudding-bag string:

Shoe the horse, shoe the mare,
But let the little colt go bare.

There was a man in our town,
And he was wondrous wise;
He jumped into a bramble bush
And scratched out both his eyes.

There were two blackbirds,
Sitting on a hill,
The one named Jack,
The other named Jill;
Fly away, Jack! Fly away, Jill!
Come again, Jack! Come again, Jill!

This is the farmer sowing the corn,
That kept the cock that crowed in the morn,
That waked the priest all shaven and shorn,
That married the man all tattered and torn,
That kissed the maiden all forlorn,
That milked the cow with the crumpled horn,
That tossed the dog
That worried the cat
That killed the rat
That ate the malt
That lay in the house that Jack built.

Inscription on stone seat in the Scottish Highlands, and title of one of Wordsworth’s poems

The wisdom of many and the wit of one.

Definition of a proverb

1 Probably based on the definition of a proverb which Lord John Russell gave one morning at breakfast at Mardock’s: “One man’s wit, and all men’s wisdom.” — Memoirs of Sir James Mackintosh [1765-1832], vol. I, p. 473
The anxious cry of Fatima, one of the wives of Bluebeard

Oh, ye'll tak' the high road an' I'll tak' the low road,
An' I'll be in Scotland before ye;
But I and my true love will never meet again.

On the bonnie, bonnie banks o' Loch Lomond.

Loch Lomond, refrain

Went out to milk and I didn't know how,
I milked the goat instead of the cow;
A monkey sittin' on a pile of straw
Wakin' at his mother-in-law.

Turkey in the straw, turkey in the hay,
Roll 'em up and twist 'em up a high tuckahaw,
And hit 'em up a tune called Turkey in the Straw.

Sugar in the gourd and honey in the horn,
I never was so happy since the hour I was born.

God rest you merry, gentlemen,
Let nothing you dismay;
Remember Christ our Savior,
Was born on Christmas Day.

The holly and the ivy,
When they are both full grown,
Of all the trees that are in the wood,
The holly bears the crown:

The rising of the sun
And the running of the deer,
The playing of the merry organ,
Sweet singing in the choir.

Carol. The Holly and the Ivy, st. 1 and refrain

With drums and guns, and guns and drums
The enemy nearly slew ye.
My darling dear, you look so queer,
Oh, Johnny, I hardly knew ye.

Irish folk song, st. 1

Where are the legs with which you run,
When you went to carry a gun?
Indeed your dancing days are done —
Oh, Johnny, I hardly knew ye.

Republican party rallying cry [1856]

Dirty work at the crossroads.

Attributed to WALTER MELVILLE'S melodrama The Girl Who Took the Wrong Turning; or, No Wedding Bells for Him

The women and children were the first to be removed from the sinking ship Birkenhead.

The weasel was a hatter's tool, and "pop" was a term meaning to pawn or "buck." The Eagle was a music hall in the City Road. The song is attributed to W. R. MANDALE.

John Charles Frémont [1815-1890] was the party's candidate for President.

But those who wish to be civilians, Jesus, they run into the millions.
Army latrine inscription. Quoted by Norman Rosten, The Big Road [1945]

We, the peoples of the United Nations, determined to save succeeding generations from the scourge of war, which twice in our lifetime has brought untold sorrow to mankind, and to reaffirm faith in fundamental human rights, in the dignity and worth of the human person, in the equal right of men and women and of nations large and small . . .

And for these ends to practice tolerance and live together in peace with one another as good neighbors . . .

Have resolved to combine these efforts to accomplish our aims.
Charter of the United Nations [June 1945], preamble ¹

Since wars begin in the minds of men, it is in the minds of men that the defenses of peace must be constructed.

We are not dealing simply with a military or scientific problem but with a problem in statecraft and the ways of the human spirit.

Because he meant to pick the lock.
Epitaph upon a Puritanical Locksmith; from William Camden Remains Concerning Britain [1637]

All the brothers were valiant, and all the sisters virtuous.
From the inscription on the tomb of the Duchess of Newcastle in Westminster Abbey [1673]

¹ Prepared for the U.S. Department of State by a board of consultants: Chester I. Barnard, J. Robert Oppenheimer, Charles A. Thomas, Harry A. Winne, and David E. Lilienthal, chairman.
² The song originated on slave plantations in pre-Civil War days. It became a formal Baptist hymn around 1900, called "I'll Overcome Some Day" by the adapter, C. Albert Tindley. It became a protest theme when used by colored workers in 1946 on picket lines in Charleston, S.C.
A house she hath, ‘tis made of such good fashion,
The tenant ne’er shall pay for reparation,
Nor will the landlord ever raise her rent
Or turn her out of doors for nonpayment;
From chimney tax this cell is free,
To such a house who would not tenant be?

INDEX

Entries are arranged alphabetically, with hyphenated words indexed as one word. Spelling is in general in accordance with Webster, with dialect spellings indexed in both dialect and standard forms.

The order for possessives and plurals of identical spelling is: author's, authors, authors'.

For fuller discussion of the index, see the section on the index (pages xvi–xviii) in the Guide to the Use of Familiar Quotations in the front of the book.
